Children's Library Fire Termed Suspicious

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON

A fire of "highly suspicious" origin raced through the Children's Library on Broadway early this morning leaving the building and the rare book collection it houses a shambles.

Preliminary damage estimates range to over $100,000—the three story building itself was reportedly insured for $90,000, its rare book collection, reportedly for $12,000.

Kingston paid firemen got the call at 3:33 a.m. from a guard at Kingston Hospital. By the time the five trucks and 14 men arrived on the scene the fire was virtually out of control. It had started, fire officials report, in the rear ground floor of the building and spread rapidly to the upper floors and adjoining rooms.

Deputy Chief Hugh Greer was in charge and immediately called in reserves via a box alarm. Volunteers from Wicks, Cordts and Rapid responded. Chief William Schreiber arrived on the scene shortly after. Union and Excelsior Hose were on standby.

The firemen were able to contain the blaze but the building was extensively damaged through a combination of heat, smoke and water damage. The rear room where the fire started was gutted and there was extensive damage to the adjoining room.

Some of the rare book collection was saved, but not much. The books were on the floor directly over where the fire started. Firemen were able to move some of the books to the front of the building, thus effecting their rescue. Some of the books, mostly reference works, dated to before the Revolutionary War.

The building housed 10,000 volumes, most of them children's books.

One unidentified volunteer fireman suffered minor injuries when struck with falling plaster at the scene of the fire.

William Mullany, president of the Kingston Area Library Board of Trustees, was on the scene shortly after 6 a.m. He commended the fire fighters for saving as much of the building and its contents as they did. "It was a good stop," agreed Schreiber. "Both paid and volunteer forces are to be commended."

The case has been turned over to the arson investigation unit of the Kingston Police Department. Firemen were back in quarters at 9 a.m.

There was no damage to the main library, located only about 10 feet from the children's library. The children's library will be closed and its programs suspended until further notice. Persons with books on loan from the children's library can turn them in at the main library.

UPI DATELINE

Franco's Doctors Give Up

MADRID, Spain — Generalissimo Francisco Franco's doctors gave up further measures to save him today after he failed to respond to their desperate struggle to prolong his life. Death was expected in a matter of hours.

The 1:30 p.m. (7:30 a.m. EST) medical bulletin, the 56th of Franco's 33-day medical ordeal, said his critical condition was deteriorating under an avalanche of worsening complications, but his brain was still functioning.

FBI Harassed Dr. King

WASHINGTON — For seven years the FBI carried out a program of harassment against Dr. Martin Luther King that included an anonymous letter threatening to destroy his reputation and suggesting he commit suicide.

FBI memos introduced Tuesday at a Senate intelligence committee hearing showed the bureau bugged and wiretapped the civil rights leader. Anticipating its attempt to discredit King would succeed, the bureau had picked its own man to succeed him as leader of the black movement.

Bomb Blast in London

LONDON — Police issued a city-wide alert today for three men and a woman seen speeding from a swank London restaurant moments after a ball-bearing bomb killed two persons and injured 17 in a deadly spray of metal.

Terrorists in a speeding automobile pitched the device through the window of Walton's restaurant at the dinner hour Tuesday, turning the elegant gray and yellow interior into a blood-stained shell.

A Voluntary Return

NEW YORK — Ending seven years as a fugitive in five foreign countries, former Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver has returned to the United States voluntarily to face charges of assault and parole violation.

"I wanted to come back," Cleaver said. "I think a situation exists in the country now where I can have my day in court."

The 40-year-old author and former Panther information minister said his political views have altered radically since he jumped $50,000 bail and fled the United States.

Gas to Cost A Penny Less

NEW YORK — Retail gasoline prices will go down only about a penny a gallon under the new energy bill, despite lawmakers' predictions of a 3 1/2-cent reduction, The New York Times reported today.

The legislation, approved last week by a House-Senate conference committee, is being prepared for White House review, but a spokesman said Tuesday President Ford has not yet decided whether he will accept the bill.

Frogmen Recover Body

BANGKOK, Thailand — Thai frogmen commandos today recovered the body of a sailor killed by Pathet Lao forces and blew up his sunken river patrol boat, effectively ending a three-day border war with Laos.

Military sources said the frogmen took advantage of early morning darkness to slip into the half-mile wide Mekong River, make the recovery and booby-trap the vessel.

The fighting — the most serious between Thailand and Laos in recent history — broke out Monday when Pathet Lao gunfire destroyed the boat and forced the crew to beach it.

Queen Pledges Support

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth pledged today that Britain's Labor government would carry on the battle against inflation and for world economic recovery agreed on with President Ford at last weekend's six-nation summit meeting in France.

"My government will maintain their full support of international efforts to restore economic activity and to reduce inflation and imbalances of payments," the Queen said in a speech opening a new Parliament session.

Hunter Killed In Greene County

TOWN OF LEXINGTON

A young Greene County man became the first area fatality of the still young deer hunting season Tuesday as he was shot in the chest apparently by his brother.

The dead man was identified by Leeds State Police as Audry Rappleyea, 30, of the Greene County Town of Lexington.

Police said Rappleyea began hunting on his family farm at about 7 a.m. Tuesday. At about 1 p.m., his brother, Jack Rappleyea, 25, also began hunting. At about 3:30 p.m. Jack Rappleyea fired one shot at a deer. He told police he missed the deer, but heard his brother shouting for help.

Searching, Jack Rappleyea found his brother, wounded in the upper right chest, in a heavy thicket about 200 yards from where he fired at the deer.

Audry Rappleyea was pronounced dead on arrival at Greene County Memorial Hospital. A coroner's verdict was pending today.

Authorities said Jack Rappleyea told them his brother was supposed to have been hunting in another area in the property.

Stewart Expects an OK For New Runway

KINGSTON

Although there remain some very important "ifs," the Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) expects that final approval for extension of the main runway at Stewart Airport will be obtained by next summer.

And if that happens, according to Michael Fiumarelli, the MTA's community relations officer, Stewart will move that much closer to becoming an active and profitable transportation facility for the Mid-Hudson region.

Fiumarelli, the guest speaker at Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the Kingston Lions Club, said that the recently-released Environmental Impact Assessment Report recommends extension of the runway from 8,000 to 12,000 feet as the "wisest course of action."

The runway extension was first scheduled in 1972, but litigation filed by opponents of the plan forced a three year delay while environmental impacts were being assessed. During that period, the MTA abandoned its plans to develop Stewart into a fourth major jetport for the New York Metropolitan area.

For that reason, Fiumarelli expects that future opposition to the runway extension will be minimal. He said that MTA's guarantee that the number of commercial operations at Stewart would be limited to 50,000 per year until 1985 and 60,000 per year between 1985 and 1995 has helped to soothe those opposed to the jetport concept.

"I think that we've shown we're sincere about developing Stewart as a regional airport," Fiumarelli said Tuesday, "at one time there were projections that Stewart would handle up to 365,000 commercial operations a year, but those plans are no longer under consideration."

Although the jetport concept has been set aside for now, the MTA is still determined that the facility will expand, and Fiumarelli said the key to those plans is the extended runway.

"An airplane can't get very far now with Stewart's short (6,000 foot) runway," he commented, "in fact, some planes couldn't even get off the ground."

With the exception of an adequate-size runway, Stewart has everything it needs to handle international and domestic arrivals and departures, including a new international arrivals building. The longer runway, said Fiumarelli, would attract a greater number of larger commercial and passenger flights.

Final approval for extension of the runway, however, is not guaranteed, and there is no assurance that the new environmental impact report will be endorsed or accepted on the local level.

But the most important factor may well be the uncertainty of the bond market and New York State's shaky fiscal footing. The pricetag for runway extension was about $12 million in 1972, it might be as high as $20 million in 1976. "There could be reason for concern," said Fiumarelli, "the state may not have the money to spend."

That may leave Stewart Airport in something of a Catch-22 existence. It is currently operating at a $2 million deficit and Fiumarelli said it can't hope to turn a profit without an extended runway to attract paying commercial flights. But if the state won't spend the money to help the airport earn more money, the prospects for a successful operation at Stewart, he said, are gloomy.

An all-day public hearing on the Environmental Impact Report will start at 9:30 a.m. Dec. 17 in Goshen, and three MTA-sponsored public briefing sessions will be held in Orange County Dec. 9, 10 and 11.

"We're looking for support from Ulster County," said Fiumarelli, "there are not too many encouraging things on the horizon for the economy of this region. We see Stewart as one of them."

The Art of Self-Defense Stops Potential Rapists

Last of Series

By Dorothy A. Narel

KINGSTON

"Women have been raped since the beginning of time. This is the first time that we're getting together to combat rape. We are teaching ourselves and each other self defense."

These were some of the introductory remarks made by Susan Rotgard, member of the Mid-Hudson NOW which was assisting the Dutchess County Women Against Rape with its first conference on the subject early this month. DCWAR was coordinated by Linda Bucove, a Marist psychology major who is participating in a senior year internship program through the college's counseling center. In introducing the program, Ms. Bucove said: "Rape must be understood for what it is—not a sexual act, but as an act of violence where sex is merely the weapon."

The U. S. Law Enforcement Assistance Administration recently concluded that response by police, prosecutors and hospitals toward rape victims is "generally poorly coordinated and inadequate."

The Freeman can report that Ulster County, at least, is trying to change that sweeping profile. The Ulster County Sheriff's Department has a newly established Sex Crimes Unit headed up by Deputy Martha Gans, both Kingston and Benedictine Hospitals are reviewing new procedures for treatment of rape victims in the emergency rooms, women deputies are on call 24 hours a day for victims and educational materials are being distributed.

But what can women do about defending themselves against rape. An Ulster County rape victim said: "Rapists get a kick out of a struggling woman. Go limp! That kind of kills it for them."

Susan Rotgard of NOW feels that women in our society have been raised, often in extremely subtle ways, to be victims. She says: "We have been psychologically prepared to accept our status as victims."

"Many of us don't even know how to scream and may never have had the experience of doing so. We've been brought up to think it un-ladylike to raise our voices . . .

We've been brought up to feel powerless in many situations—to feel that we must accept what is, that nothing we can do will change things anyway and to make the best of a bad situation. As children, we've sometimes come home crying when a playmate hits us and have been comforted; our brothers have been sent back outside to defend themselves. As women, many of us have never been hit and consequently don't know that being hit won't get you dead—it will hurt, it may leave a bruise, but it's not enough to kill us. This is the kind of conditioning that plays right into the hand-set of being a victim. This is not a put-down but rather, as we talk with each other we find that it is part of our shared experience of a growing up female. We must recognize it and then re-educate ourselves."

On the issue of Self-Defense, Sarah Young, an Aikido instructor at Bard College who is adviser to a group and not on the faculty, demonstrated the Japanese martial art. It is essentially defensive with the objective being to neutralize an opponent.

She says: "Never underestimate the effect of screaming—it can often ward off an assailant. The element of surprise or intimidation (rapists look for vulnerable women) is lost. Another effect of screaming is that it gets your energy going. Also, consider running."

Screaming Can Prove Effective

Ms. Young is of the opinion that if you consider defending yourself you must be willing to hurt someone. Also, that you are going to get hurt. She lists these important points to keep in mind in self-defense:

- Move with your whole body, don't just slap or swing an arm; get force behind your movement—use the entire force of your body.
- Make a fist by placing the thumb on the outside of your clenched hand.
- Use elbows, especially to aim at the solar plexus, which is vulnerable

• Struggling and thrashing won't do any good.

• If someone is coming toward you, try to get out of the way, don't just wait for the person to come grab you; the alternative is to attack the assailant before he attacks you.

• There is a great deal of value in shock—it can buy time to get away.

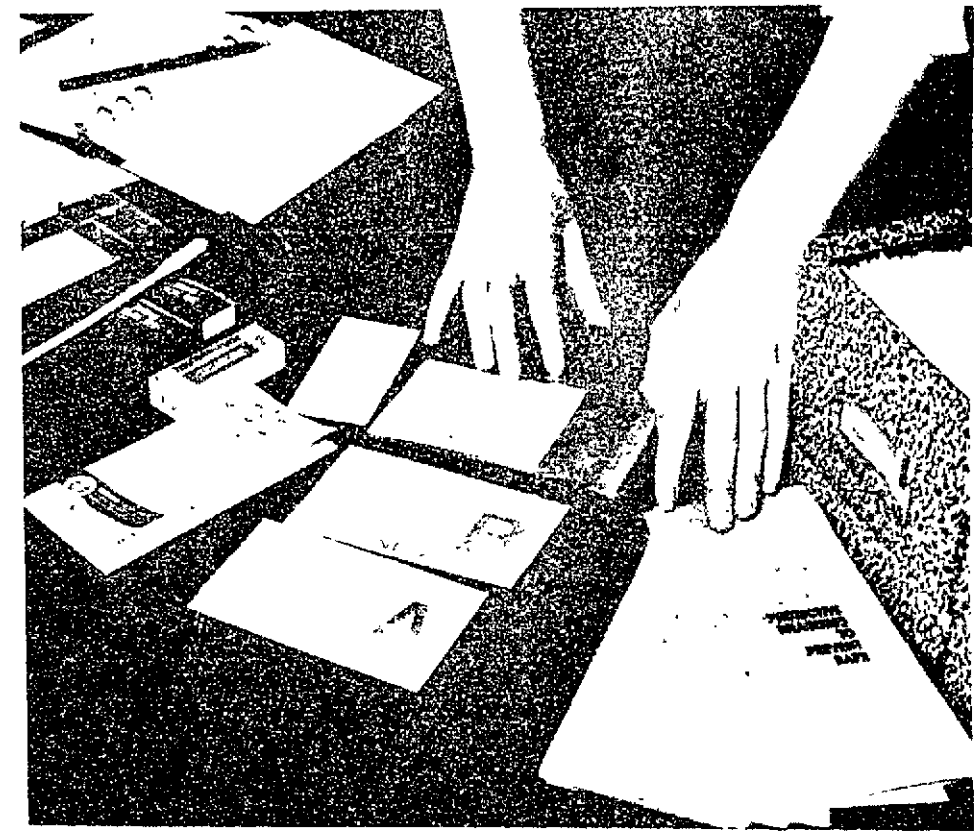

• If a knife is being used, do not become transfixed by it; consider it an extension of the arm and act accordingly.

• Kicks, especially to the shin, are effective. Ms. Young emphasized, "Practicing your kicking!"

The Ulster County Sheriff's Department also puts out a pamphlet on steps to take in protecting yourself in the home, while driving, walking and in elevators.

Rape is a trauma that victims never expect to forget. And why are there so few arrests? First of all, women will not report rape and secondly, according to Author Susan Brownmiller:

"One of the reasons that men continue to rape is that they continue to get away with it."

LITERATURE, SEX CRIME KITS

Sex, Drugs and Liquor At Rehabilitation Center

NEW YORK (UPI) — A woman who was confined in a mandatory drug rehabilitation center upstate says male staffers would grant administrative favors in return for sexual favors and drugs and liquor were readily available.

The woman, identified only as Miss Witness, provided a State Commission of Investigation hearing Tuesday with graphic testimony on abuses at the Ray Brook Rehabilitation Center near Saranac Lake, where she was a resident from November 1974 to June 1975.

She admitted having several sexual relationships with staff members, including a counselor and various guards.

The young, dark haired woman said she once asked to be transferred from a unit to cottages and another time asked to be transferred to a work release program. In both cases, she said, a counselor had her perform oral sex on him and her requests were granted.

Miss Witness said widespread homosexuality was practiced at the all-woman facility.

"Everything took place in the units," she told the session. "I've seen girls engage in oral sex."

"You could get drugs. You could have sexual relations. You could get drunk. You could do everything there."

The woman said new inmates were often forced to go through an "initiation" which involved having oral sex with all other women in the center.

An investigator for the SIC, Raymond Rudden, said interviews with former Ray Brook inmates, staff members and a check of records backed up the stories related by "Miss Witness."

Rudden said records indicated that staff members were aware that inmates took drugs and used alcohol.

Also testifying Tuesday was a former inmate at the coed Otisville facility near Middletown, one of 12 such drug programs throughout the state for some 2,000 residents who are normally ordered into them through the courts.

Identified as "Mr. Witness," he said he engaged in sex, drank alcohol and once received a marijuana cigarette from a guard. He said homosexuality was also common among inmates.

He said he had sex "two or three times a week" with female inmates in the gym, vacant cottages and other places at Otisville.

To obtain liquor, he said, inmates made daily trips to Middletown liquor stores. He said he and two other inmates once escaped simply by walking away from the center, which is located on 1,300 acres of wooded land.

Looks to Vindicate Rosenbergs

POUGHKEEPSIE Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were executed in 1953 for acts of espionage against the United States, but retired CPA Joseph V. Kahn feels they were framed, and the U.S. government is illegally withholding evidence.

He is the organizer of a planned 11 a.m., Saturday rally in front of Poughkeepsie's Main Post Office, New Market and Mansion Streets, where "up to a hundred people" will be parading with posters to focus attention on the matter.

The broad spectrum of Kahn's cause includes vindicating the Rosenbergs. Focal point of the rally, one of 40 planned across the nation, is enforced access to records of the famous case held by the FBI, CIA, Justice Department, and other agencies.

The rallies will initiate a national petition drive calling on U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi to "immediately release all files in the Rosenberg case as required by the Freedom of Information Act."

The drive is coordinated by the National Committee to Reopen the Rosenberg Case (NCRRC), with headquarters in New York City. Kahn said he was an "unofficial member."

The federal agencies were under Federal District Court order to release all records by Nov. 15 or to justify those withheld, a ruling by Justice June Green in Washington, D.C.

What happened? "We got only a few more things," Kahn told the Freeman, claiming that less than one per cent of the files have been declassified for public perusal. He said that lobbying in Congress "may have to be next."

The FBI announced this week that about 30,000 pages of documents on the Rosenberg case would be made available to the Rosenbergs' two sons, Michael and Robert Meeropol, two committee members of the NCRRC. For this privilege the FBI will charge the Meeropols $23,451 to pay for the searches plus ten cents a page for copying. The first information was released in response to a suit by the Meeropols and a Smith College history professor Allen Weinstein in August.

And Jeffrey Axelrad, an attorney for the Justice Department, stated this week that the court order had been complied with as the FBI has filed justification in Federal Court detailing reasons for withholding other material. It reportedly filed a complete inventory with accompanying explanations.

It is expected that the FBI's choice of material will be contested by the Meeropols' attorney Marshall Perlin.

Kahn, in Poughkeepsie, said the newly released material consisted of "drips and drabs," stating that the NCRRC has vowed "we will continue to fight this cover-up."

The retired CPA said he became involved with the Rosenberg cause about a year ago as secretary of the Blanche Kahn Memorial Committee, a trust fund left by his late wife who died in 1973. The committee sponsored an address by Robert Meeropol at Vassar College one year ago on the "climate of repression" of the McCarthy Era," said Kahn. He has received correspondence from the NCRRC ever since, he said, becoming a Poughkeepsie area organizer. "It was the kind of thing my wife would have done," he explained.

When asked whether he was a member of the Communist Party, Kahn excitedly claimed that "you don't have to be a Communist to be concerned socially, adding that the United States is supporting many dictatorships. "They're killing people in Chile and assassinating around the world," he threw in. When the question was repeated he declared he was not involved with the Communist Party.

The Rosenbergs were electrocuted after public branding as Communist spies supported by the Soviet Union. The issue here, said Kahn, is "the failure of federal agencies to comply with rights of individuals under the Freedom of Information Act."

Production of Electricity Termed Highly Profitable

WOODSTOCK

"The production of electricity is a highly profitable enterprise," according to New Paltz resident Peter Ford, who has done extensive research into ownership of electric utilities.

Speaking to a recent meeting of Irate Consumers of Ulster County held in Woodstock, Ford said that, far from being a financial burden or drain on the resources of a town, a properly run municipal utility can provide revenues greater than the taxes paid by privately owned utilities.

Ford cited as examples Plattsburgh, which has been running its own utility since 1941, returning five per cent of revenues collected directly to the community; and Lake Placid, in the public energy business since 1905, which returns 7.35 per cent to the community. This is in addition to providing lower rates for individuals, businesses and the town itself, he added.

Ford said these benefits can be enjoyed because public utilities do not have the large corporate salaries, advertising costs and dividends to shareholders, all currently reflected in skyrocketing electricity cost.

"We need not own the generating sources," Ford told the audience, saying that it was not necessary to buy out Central Hudson. "Any of our local townships can buy power at a wholesale cost from Central Hudson or directly from the Power Authority of the State of New York," he said.

Irate Consumers is currently setting up a citizens' advisory committee which will conduct a pre-feasibility study for Woodstock. All area residents interested in serving are asked to contact either Frank Barbone at 679-6304 or Estelle Kattelson at 679-8870 before noon.

House Dems Pushing Save NYC Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democratic leaders are pushing ahead with their bill to save New York City from bankruptcy. But they say they will gladly modify it if President Ford tells them what he will accept instead.

Ford, in complete command of a Democratic Congress, promised a statement later today — but not necessarily agreeing to any federal aid to keep the city solvent.

In Albany, state legislators waited for a signal that Washington would offer financial assistance if they enacted Gov. Hugh Carey's program to increase taxes in the nation's most heavily taxed state.

But Ford told Republican members of Congress from New York Tuesday he wanted to see action in Albany and an ironclad plan for a balanced budget in New York City before he made any commitments.

"It's a which-came-first, the chicken-or-the-egg situation," said Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., after the meeting with Ford.

"It's unfortunate." New York Mayor Abraham Beame proposed the state legislature raise commuter and resident income taxes rather than imposing a sales tax increase the assembly Republicans want.

Throughout New York City Tuesday, bands of demonstrators sporadically blocked traffic in protest of cuts in antipoverty programs. Seven persons were arrested, and a demonstration leader threatened the whole city might be shut down.

At the White House meeting, congressmen said, Ford rejected the bill coming before the House today that would provide up to $3 billion in loan guarantees over seven years. He was noncommittal as to what he could support.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said he personally got the feeling Ford could agree to something, perhaps short-term federal loans or loan guarantees reaching a peak of under $2.5 billion to tide the city through its crisis until it regains a balanced budget.

Default, said Javits, "will be dire for the nation and the world."

At the suggestion of House Republican leader John Rhodes of Arizona, the House Judiciary Committee Tuesday night approved, 32-0, a bill to facilitate a municipal bankruptcy in New York City. The measure was less restrictive on the city than the bankruptcy proposal Ford submitted two weeks ago in lieu of federal aid.

The strategy is to attach the bankruptcy provisions to the loan guarantee bill to make the measure more acceptable to Ford. The bankruptcy act would serve as a safety net if all else failed.

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said he would accept any reasonable amendment to the loan guarantee bill offered by Ford if the President "endeavors to be cooperative."

Otherwise, he said, he would push for passage of the bill. He said the Democrats have the votes to pass it, but not to override a veto.

Presidential spokesman Ron Nessen told a reporter Tuesday "you are 100 per cent right" when asked if it was correct that Ford was not going to do anything until the New York legislature acts.

Nessen said Ford's position "at this hour" was precisely what it was Nov. 13, the day the White House first indicated Ford was re-assessing his opposition to financial aid. Meantime, Carey said, New York City could get along until Dec. 11 without defaulting on its debts. The previous D-day was Dec. 1. In that light, it was probable the Senate, where a filibuster is threatened, would do nothing on New York until the end of the Thanksgiving recess which begins Friday.

Conferring On NYC

Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., left, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Rep. Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., confer prior to an evening meeting of the committee Tuesday in Washington, D.C. at which they approved a bill to amend the bankruptcy laws to facilitate bankruptcy by New York City. Earlier the White House said President Ford would make a statement on New York City. (UPI)

State Thruway Has 'Syndrome'

ALBANY
The New York State Thruway has apparently fallen victim to the "power conservation syndrome" that struck the energy industry in 1974.

The utilities found themselves in a financial bind when they promulgated conservation measures only to discover that unless the public continued its heavy use of electricity, the existing rate structures of the utilities would be inadequate to meet fixed expenses.

The Thruway Authority enacted what it considered to be "a modest increase" earlier this year—13.5 per cent which took effect on July 1—but has found that due to a number of factors, traffic has not come up to the levels expected and as a result, revenues are off.

Declaring that "our revenues are nowhere near our expectations," Gerald Cummins, chairman of the Thruway Authority, said, "This disappointing report will have to be considered as we make plans for the future."

Does that mean another fare increase is in the offing? Robert S. Balme, director of information, was asked.

"No toll increase is envisioned," said Balme. "This particular toll increase was designed to last for five years, maybe longer. There is no plan to increase tolls at this time."

The Thruway, according to the people responsible for its operation, is in solid financial shape but that could change quickly if traffic continues to tailgate projections. Traffic this summer, in fact, was 3.3 per cent lower than the summer of 1974, the first summer of the energy crisis.

"The reason we raised our tolls was because of the energy crisis. Revenues were down," said Balme.

Revenues are still "down" (in the sense that they have not reached expected levels) but the Thruway Authority insists there are no raises in the offing. At least not in the immediate future.

Meanwhile, the Thruway Authority announces that the annual permits for toll-free usage under 20 miles and for reduced rates for longer distances, will go on sale on Friday for the 1976 calendar year. The price is $50, up $10 from this year, an increase that was approved with overall increases last July. Current permits are good through Jan. 10.

Police Beat

Disturbance At School

HIGHLAND
State police were called in "as a precautionary measure" to the Highland School for Children after a fight broke out Tuesday between six or seven children there, and several other children began running up and down the halls.

Daniel Hallinan, the director of the school which houses juveniles adjudged "persons in need of supervision" by family courts, said only minor damage resulted from the disturbance. One window was broken, he said, and several tables and chairs were overturned.

Hallinan said that as far as can be determined thus far, the fight began in a boyfriend-girlfriend disagreement.

He said any of the juveniles who are found to have been directly involved in the fracas will probably be transferred to a more secure facility in the state training school system.

Hallinan said police did not become involved in quelling the disturbance, but only stood by in case they were needed.

Man Charged

Meanwhile, in other area police matters:

A Kingston man was charged with driving while intoxicated and crossing the center line and his wife wound up in the hospital Tuesday night following a two-car crash in the Town of Ulster.

Ulster Town Constables said Henry Rowles, 41, of 35 Glen Street, Kingston, made a wide turn onto Morton Boulevard at about 7:30 p.m. and was in collision with a car operated by Alex Kachura, 56, of Kingston.

Joan Rowles, 36, was listed in satisfactory condition today at Kingston Hospital.

More Manpower Funds Received

KINGSTON
Ulster County has received an additional $393,408 in federal manpower funds to be expended prior to Sept. 30, 1976.

Ulster County Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago said that $195,656 of the total has been earmarked to continue or expand current work experience and training programs through June 30, 1976. The remainder, $107,852, has been earmarked for expenditure from July 1-Sept. 30, 1976.

Savago said the latest appropriation brings Ulster County's allocation for federal fiscal year 1976 to a total of $989,260 under Title I of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act. The overall appropriation for 1976 now stands at $3,382,423, and will provide employment and training opportunities for more than 600 Ulster County residents.

The Numbers Game

Political armchair quarterbacks spend time after general elections trying to second guess the public and to form a meaningful trend. While the imponderables are many, this is the way voters in local elections thought fit to reshuffle political fortunes.

Of Ulster County's 20 towns, the beginning of the new year will see 10 Republican and 10 Democratic supervisors.

This is a switch from the present 12 Republicans, seven Democrats and one Independent (A. Michael Schovel of Saugerties). If you throw in the county's six other incorporated municipalities, you would add three Democratic chief executives (Kingston, Rosendale and Ellenville); and two Republican (New Paltz and Pine Hill). Saugerties Village has officials in local independent parties.

This would give Democrats the top elected official in 13 municipalities and the Republicans in 12. But, the GOP still retains a 20-13 voting edge in the Ulster County Legislature.

What does all this mean? It means that Ulster County residents are represented at both the state and national level by members of both major parties.

There is another set of statistics worth watching. Of the county's 20 towns, only nine will continue with the same supervisor. Of the 11 new supervisors, six will replace incumbents they defeated; in eight of those 11 towns, the party affiliation of the supervisor is a change, indicating a shift of political power from one party to another in 40 per cent of the towns.

Once again, however, solidarity was not common in Ulster County. Five towns switched from Republican to Democratic supervisors and two the other way around (three if you toss in Schovel).

Perhaps Lindsay Hoyt, newly-elected supervisor of the Town of Shandaken, summed up the Republican versus Democrat stereotype best election night.

Shandaken had just gone from a 5-0 GOP board to 3-2 Democrat, with Hoyt, a Democrat, at the helm. He commented on his victory, "I'm an old time resident—a lot of people in town know me."

The Attica Bill

Ulster County Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey is one of the sponsors of a bill to be filed in Albany this week calling for the state to pay for the defense of troopers indicted as a result of the Attica Prison uprising in 1971.

The Freeman feels that since troopers were ordered into Attica by the state, and they were on duty during the uprising, then expenses incurred by them in defense of their actions during the rebellion should be paid by the state.

State police involved in the uprising have been forced to turn to the New York State Police PBA for legal representation and more than $200 thousand has been spent in defense funds.

It is a miscarriage of justice for the State of New York to provide legal defense funds for criminals and not for its police force.

Fishing Jurisdiction

Editor's note: The following letter to the editor has been received from former City Assessor Matthias G. Richardson on the subject expanding the territorial limits of the United States from the present 12 miles to a 200-mile limit. The House of Representatives has approved the legislation and is now before the Senate for consideration.

Richardson quotes a document prepared by the staff of Fisheries Communications, a non-profit group headquartered in Stonington, Me.

"Congress is considering a bill which would give the United States jurisdiction over the fish stocks in the waters out 200 miles from the coast, an area which would include waters above approximately 2,222,000 square nautical miles of continental shelf and slope. Some of the most fertile fishing ground in this zone lies off New England, and area which has been the scene of a massive invasion of foreign fishing vessels since the early 1960s."

Whereas in 1960, U.S. fishermen used to take 99 per cent of the catch from those waters, they now take only somewhere in the neighborhood of 16 per cent. Right now each one there are an average of over 200 foreign boats fishing off New England alone, in boats capable of catching 50 tons or more of fish in one tow of their net and accompanied by boats which process the fish right there.

The massive foreign fishing effort has more than cut in half the catch from this fertile area and has decimated some species, notably haddock, which some scientists feel may never recover. A major proportion of the fish population of the world live in the relatively shallow waters above the continental shelves. If properly managed, instead of the rape taking place right now, the waters to which the bill would give the U.S. rights have an estimated annual production of at least 18 billion pounds of fish—about 10 per cent of the total estimated world production. U.S. fishermen in boats one third the size, have been unable to compete against the huge, government subsidized ships and "pulse" fishing—a method whereby ing reason behind the need for a 200-mile fishing limit. The figures below document the depletion which has happened in the fifteen years of intensive fishing off New England. Foreigners as well as Americans say these fleets have nowhere else to go—they have devastated the fishing grounds off their own shores. U.S. fishermen say this must not happen to the stocks off New England.

The issue of ownership of the oceans has been a heated one and until just recently when U.S. State Department agreed the need for conservation was overriding, they opposed any effort to extend even the fishing jurisdiction beyond the generally accepted international situation. This includes a 3-mile territorial sea with a 12-mile "contiguous zone," a zone in which a coastal country can control certain specified activities including fishing. The State Department's opposition has come for reasons of defense, and they have been supported by some oil and mineral companies which want to exploit those resources within 200 miles of other countries.

In addition international commissions and meetings, as in the Law of the Sea Conference, have failed to come up with a solution that would save the fish off our shores before they are destroyed, and return our fishing industry to catching food for U.S. consumers.

The issue comes down to immediate passage of a 200-mile limit bill by Congress and implementation of conservation measures."

Dear Citizens of Kingston,

I want to compliment you all on your lovely city. It was by some strange circumstance that we lost our route going thru Kingston. Trying to get back on route, we found ourselves driving thru city and Main Street. We were amazed at the lovely homes, so neatly painted and the business sections having new store fronts and painted so nicely.

We were so glad we had the opportunity to see you lovely town. It brings back faith in our American Heritage.

Bless you all.

Inside Report

Ford and Florida

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

ORLANDO, Fla. — Even before his announcement of candidacy, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan has built up a chilling margin over President Ford among Republican party activists and leaders in the crucial Florida presidential primary.

Indeed, if the March 9 primary (third in the nation following New Hampshire and Massachusetts) were to pit Reagan against plain Jerry Ford, with Mr. Ford magically stripped of his presidential incumbency, the outcome would be a smashing Reagan victory.

The fact that Mr. Ford is President is his only political asset in a conservative state whose Republican delegation almost went for Reagan over Richard Nixon at the 1968 presidential convention. The state party has continued to move right since then.

What is not certain, however, is whether rank-and-file primary election voters — perhaps 400,000 or more of the 900,000 total Republican registration will actually vote — are in lockstep with the party's conservative leadership.

For example, a confidential statewide poll taken for the White House shows Mr. Ford leading by 10 percentage points over Reagan; and a private poll of some 300 members of the Republican county committee of Broward County — the conservative heartland of Ft. Lauderdale — taken three weeks ago gave Mr. Ford a surprising 48 per cent, Reagan 38 per cent, with the balance undecided.

Much of this apparent sentiment derives from a deep-seated aversion (always stronger among Republicans than Democrats) against turning out an incumbent President, even an accidental President. Hence, one basic concept for the all-important Florida primary developed by Reagan's chief national strategist, John Sears, is that Mr. Ford will be overwhelmed here — if the incumbency factor is diminished.

Reagan forces reckon that 70 per cent of the President's strength within his own party derives from incumbency and, further, that a Ford defeat in the Feb. 24 New Hampshire primary would cost him between 7 and 10 percentage points in the two-weeks-later Florida contest. Why? Because a defeat in New Hampshire, and each subsequent defeat, would unravel the protective cloak of incumbency.

In fact, however, incumbency also could turn into a two-edged sword for Mr.

Ford, both his glittering asset and his Achilles heel. For example, no issue is politically more explosive here than Communist Cuba, particularly in Miami's "Little Cuba" where one-fifth of the 120,000 registered Dade County Republicans are naturalized Americans who fled Fidel Castro. As President, Mr. Ford is moving toward relaxation of U.S.-Cuba relations, but he has now been warned by supporters here to do nothing more until after the Florida primary.

Indeed, Reagan's Miami operatives are planning a January registration drive, with a program to train 100 deputy registrars and a costly media campaign, to register thousands of new Cuban-American voters among 60,000 unregistered Cuban refugees in Miami's Dade County. Although the best-laid plans for such last-minute registration drives often accomplish nothing, Reaganites believe that every new Republican registrant they get will be a vote for Reagan.

As President, Mr. Ford could at any time be forced to make a decision on Cuba costing him heavily in the March 9 primary. The same is true with the Panama Canal, an issue only marginally less explosive than Cuba among Florida's Spanish-speaking population.

But far worse for Mr. Ford's Florida managers, headed by the competent Rep. Louis Frey, is the President's seeming unawareness that he is in a battle here that could conceivably cost him his presidency. As one top uncommitted Republican told us: "If the White House has a campaign going on down here, it is a secret."

Local party leaders here in Orange County were flabbergasted when Mr. Ford regretted an invitation to speak to the county's Republican fund-raising dinner during the party's Lincoln Day festivities next February. The substitute: Ronald Reagan.

Likewise, a White House decision canceling a Ford speech at a special Congressional Medal of Honor ceremony in Lakeland Nov. 11 infuriated Republicans. The banner headline in the Lakeland Ledger — "Ford Snubs Lakeland" — ran over a picture of Mr. Ford addressing a West Virginia party fund-raising dinner the same night.

Such cavalier treatment is not advancing Mr. Ford's effort to overcome his party's leaders and activists and persuade rank-and-file Republicans to stay with him next March.

WASHINGTON — Deep within the Central Intelligence Agency, locked in one of its super-secret, three-way combination safes, is the story of an illegal operation.

It was a CIA farce, an exercise in domestic delirium, a Mack Sennett comedy come true. It was called Project Mudhen.

I was the villain in this bit of CIA hilarity. It began over my access to information which the CIA had intended for the President, not for me.

The CIA's top snoops were particularly upset over a series of columns I wrote in late December, 1971. The most urgent of them warned that the Soviets had threatened to intercept a naval task force, which the U.S. had sent into the Bay of Bengal during the India-Pakistan war.

In another column, I wrote that the strongmen were backing in Cambodia, Lon Nol, was "a sick man, both physically and mentally." U.S. officials were worried, I reported, about his "haphazard, out-of-channel and ill-coordinated conduct of military operations."

I also wrote a Christmas Eve column, describing in discomfiting detail the threat to the peace in the Holy Land.

Not long after the New Year, the CIA began a search for my sources. A staggering total of 1,566 CIA employees were grilled, without a single confession or clue.

Finally, on Feb. 15, 1972, the CIA out of sheer desperation placed me under surveillance. Twenty CIA heavies, laden with binoculars, walkie-talkies, secret cameras and other James Bond paraphernalia, followed me around the country and photographed people entering my office.

Three stakeout cars were strategically deployed around my house, like a scene from a TV mystery, ready to tail me whichever direction I headed.

These cloak-and-dagger routines happen to violate the law, which restricts the CIA to foreign operations. The CIA is also supposed to chase spies, not newspaper columnists.

Project Mudhen, therefore, became one of the CIA's deep, dark secrets, in the same category as assassinations, burglaries and other extrajudicial doings.

The project got its code name, I presume, because the mudhen is noted for rooting around in the mud and for its obstreperous clacking when riled. But I am mystified by the personal code name assigned to me, "Brandy," since I am a notorious teetotaler.

For the next few weeks, I was accompanied far and near by my CIA shadows. They rushed with me on March 15 to catch the shuttle plane to Newark, N.J., where some conspiratorial-looking youths hustled me into a car and drove me along backroads to South Orange.

But my CIA escorts were disappointed. The circuitous route was taken to avoid traffic. For all their breathless trailing, they got to hear me deliver a lecture at Seton Hall University.

The situation became more hilarious when CBS chose this same period to film a TV report on my activities for the show, "Sixty Minutes." For several days, CBS

On My Mind

'Use Your Head'

By Ralph Ingersoll

How does one stay cheerful in a world whose stupidities seem to multiply? Faith is the only answer I know, faith that there is nothing new about scarcity of wisdom and humane leadership amongst us, and, faith that we have survived even greater shortages than we are suffering from now.

Of course, I envy my father, whose active life as Civil Engineer, beginning when he graduated from Yale's Sheffield Scientific School in 1880, was undisturbed by a major world conflict until World War I began. His faith was in the beneficence of reason, applied in how own free land had such a solid foundation.

Politicians might be crooked, but time would always expose them and meanwhile the world would continue in balance and, over all, to solve its problems with good sense and inventiveness. His faith was in facts and in common sense — and in his countrymen's dedication to basic honesty.

Was I brain washed beyond redemption by him, and by the world he brought me into? Obviously I can't answer that objectively, but I can testify that the faith he gave me I still possess. And I still possess it after leading a very, very different life than his.

A first World War washed over me when I was an undergraduate — and a first disillusionment with the universality of common sense followed on its heels.

cameramen followed me around, with the CIA cameramen, presumably, not far behind. The result must have been a bewildering ring-around-a-roy.

But for the CIA, the most traumatic event occurred on March 17 when I had a luncheon meeting with the then CIA director, Richard Helms, at the Madison Hotel in Washington. Helms' purpose was to persuade me to drop certain lines of inquiry that might create security problems.

But this required him to explain, unhappily, what secret national apperances might be upset. At Project Mudhen, therefore, the forthcoming encounter was viewed with grave alarm. The CIA, assuming I might do unto them as they were doing unto me, feared I would come to the luncheon rigged up with concealed bugging equipment.

I am not privy to what electronic countermeasure the CIA took, except that it was elaborate. Apparently, Helms was rigged with sophisticated electronic equipment capable either of detecting or neutralizing my non-existent recording device. A CIA technician, I understand, manned the dials in a nearby mobile unit or hotel room.

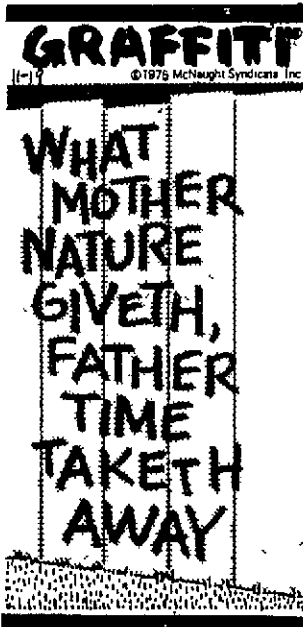

At the appointed hour, Helms faced me across the table, confident of his superior wattage. Relaxed and unfettered, he made an effective pitch, and I agreed to cooperate.

By late March, strategic sources tipped me off that I was being followed and helpfully provided me with the license numbers of the stakeout cars. I unleashed my nine children to initiate their own surveillance of the surveillants. My junior sleuths not only located the cars but photographed them.

On April 3, 1972, the men with binoculars ceased their vigil, perhaps demoralized by the countering of my Katzenjammer paparazzi.

Meanwhile, back at the CIA, the gumshoes were able to state categorically that my sources were located either in the State Department, or the National Security Agency, or the Defense Intelligence Agency, or the Naval Intelligence Command. Mudhen thus exonerated the CIA and narrowed down the field of suspects to about half the U.S. intelligence community.

Will a similar extravagance discover the source of today's column? Watch out, CIA! The kids on my block are ready for you.

Berry's World

To the generations that are now inheriting the messy world I survived in — somehow — I can only say "hang on to what Faith you still have nd, for Heavens and your own sake, begin using your heads to set things straight."

I take a part of that last phrase from my father's early brain washing. When — as often — I revealed my stupidity or ineptness to him, his standard response was not sympathy but the coolly given advice "use your head, boy, use your head."

I'm still for each and every one of us taking it. To tinker with a more famous phrase: We have nothing to fear but not using the brains God gave us, we still free Americans.

Wallace Now Outgrown the 'Gee Whiz' Phase

GOV. WALLACE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The "Gee Whiz" phase of George Wallace's career as a presidential candidate now is over. From here on, the Alabama governor must be judged exactly like every other Democrat seeking the party's 1976 nomination.

Ever since Wallace appeared in Indiana and Wisconsin to embarrass local politicians by capturing sizable votes in their 1964 presidential primaries, his performance has been measured against a special yardstick.

Wallace's wins and losses in both South and North were regarded more as an indication of segregationist sentiment and public alienation than of his presidential appeal.

The reaction, when he pulled off a coup in some northern state or completely routed opponents in the South, commonly was "Gee whiz, look at the backlash vote Wallace got."

It was well into the 1972 primaries before politicians began taking Wallace seriously as a factor at the national convention.

Now, Wallace is a formal candidate for the nomination next year. He has to get 1,505 delegate votes to win. Beating the field in Florida will get him 81 votes and upsetting the establishment in Michigan will bring in 133. But these remarkable facts of 1972 are no more than the essentials for 1976. Wallace has nothing left to prove except that he can go all the way.

The governor said when he declared his candidacy that he will not compete in the New Hampshire primary because other Democrats have been campaigning there for a year and had too much head start. That is a plausible reason to stay out, but three other points should be noted:

First, Wallace has been "campaigning" for much more than a year in every state with multimillion dollar direct mail appeals. He certainly is not starting his campaign from square one and in some respects has had far more exposure to the voters than any other candidate.

Second, Wallace was as free as anyone else to start last winter in New Hampshire, and as George McGovern demonstrated in 1972, the campaign begins when the first candidate begins it.

The third point is that Wallace is basing his campaign on an appeal to Democrats who reject what the governor calls the "ultraliberals" in the party. In Wallace terms, that label probably would fit most or all of the Democrats who are going to enter New Hampshire, and if he has the constituency he claims, there should be a large bloc of votes waiting for him there.

The governor has also said he is "tired" of questions about his health and that he would submit to independent medical examination if the rest of the candidates also would do so.

That may be a good idea, but it will not end the discussion even if the other candidates go along with it.

Dwight Eisenhower and John Kennedy, just to name two candidates, also had repeated questioning about their health problems during campaigns. As a serious candidate for the physically taxing job of president, Wallace can expect no less.

Breaking More New Abortion Ground

WASHINGTON (UPI) — William Baird, a pioneer in the field of birth control and abortion rights, says the Supreme Court's decision Monday to hear a case on the rights of minors to get abortions is the first of its kind.

Baird is attacking a Massachusetts law requiring an unwed minor to get consent from both parents before she can have an abortion. Defendants are state Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti and a parent, Jane Hunerwadel, who was allowed by the trial court to represent all Massachusetts parents with unmarried minor daughters who are or might become pregnant.

"I'm tremendously elated that the court has decided to hear the case, which will decide whether minors have the same medical rights as adults," Baird said.

"What makes the case so unusual is that I am fighting not only ... Mr. Bellotti, but also a group of parents, called parent interveners, who are from the antiabortion 'right to life' group. So, in effect, it means that minors will be fighting parents before the U.S. Supreme Court, which has never happened before."

The appeal by Bellotti, who lost in a lower court, will be heard along with a Missouri abortion case, which includes other factors besides parental consent.

Bridge Bids

TOWN OF WAWARSING

Bids will be opened Dec. 18 in Albany by the New York State Department of Transportation (DOT) for the rehabilitation of a bridge over the Rondout Creek on Route 55 in the Town of Wawarsing.

According to specification prepared by the department, the 324-foot span will be given a new concrete deck which will be 24 feet wide between the curbs. In addition, approach pavements will be resurfaced, new curbs and railings installed and new expansion joints provided.

The span is located just west of Route 55A in the vicinity of the Rondout Reservoir.

The project is one of 16 statewide that have been let for bid by the department. In addition to other bridge rehabilitation projects, the proposed contracts call for reconditioning of certain older highways, installation of safer guide railings at a number of sites and landscaping of more than 12 miles of the Southern Tier Expressway.

"A wide variety of tasks is represented here," commented DOT Commissioner Raymond T. Schuler, "but their objective is similar in that each is designed to be responsive to public needs and desires through responsible actions."

"Whether we are erecting a pedestrian bridge at a busy intersection in Westchester County, resurfacing five miles of the Adirondack Northway or building a riverfront park next to Interstate 81 at Binghamton, our united purpose in DOT remains the same."

Payment Made
To Ulster County

ALBANY State Transportation Commissioner Raymond T. Schuler announced today that a quarterly payment of $79,962 has been made to Ulster County for public transportation provided by private operators.

The service provided by contract to the county will carry an estimated 112,000 passengers more than 320,000 miles during the quarter.

The payment is the third of four quarterly grants provided under the permanent operating assistance program recommended by Governor Carey and approved by the Legislature earlier this year.

State appropriations totaling $103 million for the year will be matched by localities under the program.

The third quarter payment to Ulster County, Commissioner Schuler noted, reflects amended legislation which increases by half the state grant to systems not eligible for Federal aid. The greater State aid comparably reduces the local matching amount needed, he said.

The commissioner said the governor's permanent operating assistance program is aimed at relieving the fiscal distress of mass transit systems since the farebox alone cannot support public transportation and federal aid is insufficient or unavailable.

Without state assistance, Commissioner Schuler said, deterioration of transportation systems will continue, fares will rise and services will be reduced.

Land of Contradictions

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — Laos, the last of the Indo-chinese nations to acquire a Communist government, has shown a remarkable ability to pick up new habits without discarding the old.

The Communist Pathet Lao began a low-key takeover in this landlocked Southeast Asian land in May. Five months later, they are firmly in the saddle and important changes are taking place.

Still, the old order lingers. The Kingdom of Laxang, "Land of a Million Elephants," was founded in the 14th century. Today, though controlled by the Pathet Lao, the country now called Laos is still a monarchy, with King Savang Vatthana, crowned in 1959, still ruling as a figurehead chief of state.

In Vientiane, street peddlers sell the country's new official flag — the red, white and blue of the Pathet Lao — alongside the traditional flag — white elephants on a field of red.

Some people occasionally still speak English in Vientiane and some signs are still written in French, an echo of bygone colonial days. Now the Laotians, with typical ecumenism, are offering a free one-year course in Russian.

Then there are the capital cities. Laos has always had an administrative capital here in Vientiane and a royal capital in Luang Prabang.

But without dismantling either of the first two capitals, the new regime may be building a third, described vaguely as a "Liberation Capital," on the Plain of Jars in Central Laos.

Visiting Laos is a chancy business, but it is possible. Unlike its Communist neighbors — the Vietnams and Cambodia — Laos has not relinquished membership in tourist associations.

Any Laotian embassy or consulate in the world can issue visas, but the response to an application ranges from acceptance to "wait and see" to rejection.

A half-dozen boats still ply the no-man's waters of the Mekong River to take venturesome visitors from Thailand to Laos, but there are frequent reports of refugees killed on the river in exchanges of gunfire between the two countries.

Thus, despite government spokesman Ouday Souvannavong's recent announcement that the new Pathet Lao regime welcomes visitors, it is not so easy to go.

A local hotelier complained that guests come "one by one."

Russians and Vietnamese come to Laos in large numbers these days. There are some French, Germans and Japanese also, most looking for investments.

The visit is nice as long as you don't "make waves." One American college student got thrown in jail for complaining that a cabdriver overcharged him.

An International Stretcher Case

DACCA, Bangladesh (UPI) — Bangladesh, born of war, struggled for life against poverty, corruption and violence. But despite the high hopes which attended its conception, it is an international stretcher case.

Bangladesh, formerly Pakistan's eastern wing, emerged from the ashes of the December, 1971 India-Pakistan war.

Sheikh Mujibur Rahman had spent nine months in a Pakistani prison when he returned to Dacca Jan. 10, 1972. Thousands of Bengalis cheered him.

"My life's goal has been fulfilled," the charismatic sheikh told his admirers. "My Bengal is independent."

But the heady wine of victory soon brought a hangover. Despite foreign aid — including American contributions will reach $1 billion in a few months — Bangladesh discovered it could not solve its problems under Mujib's leadership.

The Sheikh is gone now, killed along with his family in a military coup last Aug. 15.

The problems remain. The new president, Khondakar Mushtaque Ahmed, 55, was serving as minister for trade and commerce at the time of the coup.

The day after he took power, Mushtaque announced the army had stepped forward in response to the masses' demand for a change.

But Mushtaque was forced to resign Nov. 7 in an apparent military takeover and Abu Sadat Mohammed Sayem, 58, chief justice of the Bangladesh supreme court and a man with no previous political background, became the new president.

The internal political change, so far, is not much in evidence. Many Mujib supporters remain in top government posts.

But the coup could bring some adjustment to the rather delicate alignments on the South Asian sub-continent.

Bangladesh has 77 million citizens, the great majority of whom are Moslems. But there also are an estimated 10 million Hindus.

Diplomatic observers here say the new government understands the necessity for maintaining good relations with India, the predominantly Hindu giant to the west. Some fear that India might be tempted to intervene, as it did in 1971, if religious conflict heats up.

So, if Bangladesh tilts away from India, the change will probably be gradual.

Internally, Bangladesh has to face the problem of satisfying the young majors who mounted the coup to end massive government corruption.

The leaders currently are not on active duty on the armed forces. They are paying close attention to the corruption trials of former government officials now under way.

But the government has to find something for the majors to do.

"They must be honored," one government official said recently, but he feared that giving them command of troops might risk another coup.

"Perhaps later they could be given political jobs or form some sort of a presidential guard," he said.

Then there is the problem of the lingering love many Bengalis have for Mujib, affectionately known in several parts of the country as "Bangubandu," which means "friend of Bengal."

"The new government must prove that Mujib was a puppet of India and the Soviet Union," the official said. He acknowledged the task may need a delicate public relations touch since it will risk the wrath of the two most powerful supporters of Bengali independence.

However, balanced against the need to hold friendly relations with India and the Soviet Union, is the need to fill Bangladesh's economic and social needs.

Bangladesh is one of the most populous nations on earth, but 40 per cent of the people, according to international experts, are chronically malnourished.

That is why the new government still seeks massive help from the Western aid consortium.

The government of Maj. Gen. Ziaur Rahman is third the poverty-stricken nation of 77 million people has seen since the assassination of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman in a military-backed coup last Aug. 15.

Ziaur Rahman, a 39-year-old career army man without a post, told the nation in a radio broadcast that he had assumed complete control of the government as chief martial law administrator and commander-in-chief of the army.

The general's announcement, which shocked observers of the tumultuous Bangladesh political scene, came only eight hours after President A. M. Sayem abolished parliament and the council of ministers but promised elections in February, 1977.

Rahman made no mention of Sayem in his nationwide radio broadcast. Sayem was sworn in as president after he took over from Khondakar Mushtaque Ahmed who resigned.

Ahmed succeeded Mujib as president after the founder and father of Bangladesh was gunned down in a bloody coup led by disgruntled army officers. Members of the Sheikh's family and several of his aides and confidantes also were killed in the first of what has become a series of power grabs.

Expansion Termed 'New Area Hope'

NEWBURGH Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman (R-26) has termed the proposed expansion of the runway at Stewart Airport in Orange County "a new hope for the region."

Reacting to a recently-released Environmental Impact Report, which determined that expansion of the Stewart facilities would be environmentally safe, Gilman said he is "convinced that an expanded Stewart Airport would be an economic stimulus for all of Orange County."

"There are numerous hurdles ahead," Gilman added, "but I am enthused about the prospect for the numerous construction jobs which will be created if and when the work commences."

Gilman noted that a spokesman for Landrum and Brown, the consulting firm for the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, said that jet noise will not increase dramatically with the expanded runway and supporting facilities at Stewart.

In its report, the planning firm discussed three alternatives, including the proposed plan (extension of the runway to 12,000 feet), no change in the runway length and the construction of a new 12,000 foot runway with no extension of existing runways.

"It is now up to the public to become involved in the planning process by participating in the forthcoming public hearings," he congressman stated. The Federal Aviation Administration is expected to announce its decision on the proposed expansion in July, 1976.

Fish Sponsors MIA Resolution

WASHINGTON, D.C. Congressman Hamilton Fish (R-23rd) has sponsored a House Resolution calling on President Ford to request a full accounting of all Americans still missing-in-action in Southeast Asia during his upcoming trip to the People's Republic of China.

"It is essential that the United States gain the full cooperation of the North Vietnamese so that this country can investigate the fate of our 862 Americans still listed as missing. The Chinese are in a position to exert pressure on the Hanoi government in obtaining this cooperation," Congressman Fish declared.

The Millbrook Republican believes that this is a good time to see just how far our relations with the Chinese have progressed. "The Chinese can do a great service for the people of the U.S. if they can get North Vietnam to help us determine the fate of our MIAs," Fish said.

"In this session of Congress, the House of Representatives has accomplished a great deal concerning the MIA problem. Earlier, the House established a Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia. Now with this resolution, the Congress is continuing to do all it can according to the Constitution to end the anguish of families concerned with the fate of their loved ones," Fish stated.

Gilman Lauds Kissinger's Stand

WASHINGTON, D.C. Rep. Benjamin A. Gilman (R-26) has lauded Secretary of State Henry Kissinger for allowing the House Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia to continue its search for MIA's in the Far East.

Gilman and the nine other members of the House committee attended a working breakfast with the Secretary of State recently and discussed the committee's efforts to obtain factual information on missing persons in Southeast Asia, to secure the remains of known dead and to seek the release of any American civilians seeking exit.

Kissinger indicated at that meeting, said Gilman, that the U.S. government is willing to talk with the governments of Indochina on a wide range of issues in a spirit of cooperation and mutual respect.

"I am most encouraged that Secretary Kissinger has given his strong support to the committee's efforts," Congressman Gilman said. "The Secretary has also given the committee the 'green light' to proceed with discussion on its own with representatives of the governments of North and South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia."

"Secretary Kissinger pointed out to us that he saw no obstacle to the principle of normalization of relations and that the U.S. was also prepared to reciprocate on the basis of gestures made by the Southeast Asian governments," Gilman said.

"In fact, Dr. Kissinger pointed out that the American government is in the process of making such a reciprocal move."

Gilman said that in the interest of reciprocity for the recent release of nine Americans from Hanoi, the Department of State has relaxed certain restrictions formerly imposed on church groups who are seeking to provide clothing and medical supplies to the Vietnamese people. An announcement to this effect will be made shortly.

The Secretary of State noted that in response to the Committee's request the President has agreed to include in his agenda a discussion of the MIA issue during his trip to China.

"Our Select Committee is encouraged that Secretary Kissinger has shown a sincere desire to proceed on a basis of partnership and consultation with the legislative branch to resolve the problems surrounding persons still missing in Southeast Asia, Congressman Gilman concluded.

The members of the Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia in addition to Congressmen Gilman and Montgomery are: Richard Ottinger, (New York, 24th District); Patricia Schroeder, (Colorado, 1st District); Tom Harkin, (Iowa, 5th District); Jim Lloyd, (California, 35th District); John Joseph Moakley, (Massachusetts, 8th District); Tennyson Guyer, (Ohio, 4th District); and Paul McCloskey, (California, 12th District).

Retirement Home Needs Thought

By UPI

If you're 50 or over, you're one of 53 million Americans in a group that makes up 27 per cent of the population and chances are good you're at least starting to think about retirement.

While for some people, retirement will mean just a more relaxed lifestyle at the same old stand, for many it will mean a new home.

For them, the first consideration usually is "where," followed in rapid succession by thought for the economics, the kind of house they'll live in, the kind of life they'll lead.

Statistically, most people live in their own single-family home, and many want to continue doing so. Most who think of moving when they retire are anxious to resettle in warm climates and many of them think in terms of retirement communities.

Retirement is a major step; moving to a new part of the country an even bigger one. It should not be undertaken lightly, and the earlier you begin planning the better.

Bryant Prentice III, president of Universal Development Corp., Chicago, developers of a new retirement community in Mesa, Ariz., a Phoenix suburb, has some observations based on research done in planning for the community and contacts with buyers of retirement homes.

Going beyond just housing, he said, developers must ask themselves, as retirees must, "What is retirement?"

Some people, he said, think of it as the time to quit work and do nothing. Most consider it as the time to quit work and do those things which they enjoy; things they've always done but never really had enough time to do in quantity; to spend time creatively.

This means a retirement community developer must provide — and a retiree look for — a lifestyle that includes golf, swimming, fishing, crafts and other recreation and entertainment as well as shopping and other services.

Retirement to a community, Prentice noted, involves uprooting in which people not only are separated from home and family but placed in an alien atmosphere to which they can't always relate or adapt. For that reason, he said, developers must try to ease people into their new way of life through booklets, new-comer parties and meetings. And retirees, ideally, will plan so they can make the transition easily.

Factors to be considered, Prentice said, include:

Health. Climate to suit individual preferences and medical facilities are important.

Private Nuclear Industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Among the many questions the government soon must face as the nuclear power industry assumes a bigger role in meeting the nation's energy needs is whether private enterprise should produce atomic fuel.

The manufacture of the enriched uranium that fires the country's 55 operating nuclear generating plants is now a government monopoly. President Ford proposed last June that the government help private industry get in the business.

The Government Accounting Office issued its thoughts on the matter earlier this month and Congress' Joint Committee on Atomic Energy is expected to hold hearings in December.

The issue centers around uranium enrichment. The uranium found in nature will not work in atomic reactors because it contains only seven-tenths of 1 per cent of the fissionable isotope, uranium 235. To be efficiently burned in reactors, the uranium 235 must be concentrated to 2 to 4 per cent.

The government has been enriching uranium since the 1940s and now has massive enrichment plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn., Paducah, Ky., and Portsmouth, Ohio.

The capacity of these facilities is sold out. Even though one of these factories is being expanded, its additional production is committed to nuclear plants now planned here and abroad. The three U. S. plants cannot meet the uranium needs of any additional power plants.

Finances. Most retirees must get along on reduced income. Early planning is important here, and housing decisions should take into account costs of food, clothing and transportation as well.

Activities. Few people thrive on inactivity. Even the most adaptable person may find the new leisure status difficult. It is easier for the person who always has had outside interests which they can expand. Early planning helps here, too.

Travel. This is governed by personal choice, and budget.

Housing, too, is a personal choice — the dedicated gardener would not of choice live in an apartment; the retiree who travels six or eight months of the year probably would not want a big house. For most, reasonable cost and easy maintenance are desirable.

Moving to an unfamiliar location is a big step and one that can be planned long in advance. A retiree can spend vacations beforehand exploring various areas, becoming familiar in advance with the one where he plans to settle. Never should a move be made, property purchased, sight unseen.

Prentice says United development determined a community in which retirees would feel most at home should, as closely as possible, resemble the city or town from which they came. And it should have a variety of housing styles similar to cities across the country. For this reason it has included conventional single-family housing, townhouses and apartments in its 582-acre development. Modular homes, built by UDC at its own factory in Chandler, Ariz., are customized by on-site room additions. Costs are kept moderate, Prentice said.

With preparation, he said, one doesn't have to be fearful at the prospect of retirement moving, nor does the prospect have to be financially upsetting.

Mutual Assistance Program Set

RHINEBECK
In collaboration with Northern Dutchess Hospital, the Rhinebeck Chapter of American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) will set up a broad program of mutual assistance, including a "hot-line" telephone with volunteer hospital services by AARP members.

Mrs. Mary Hayden, chairman of the chapter's Miss Sunshine Committee, made the announcement at the group's recent meeting in the Rhinebeck Town Hall.

The hospital will supply a room with telephone for the "hotline" service daily from 9-11 a.m. for assistance to person living alone and for others who may need transportation for medical visits, shopping, etc.

This service will be manned by 14 AARP volunteers, with the assistance of the hospital's social services department. Volunteers will be trained and are requested to serve two hours every two weeks, with each volunteer to recruit an alternate.

The chapter, through its transportation Committee, will aid the hospital in bringing patients who need transportation to the hospital, whether or not they are AARP members.

The chapter will supply other volunteers to aid in the extended care section of the hospital.

The hospital will arrange for flu shots for persons 62 or older without charge. The hospital is also currently investigating possibilities for glaucoma, EKG and X-ray clinics.

The chapter honored Mrs.

Loughren S. Smith, Northern Dutchess correspondent for Radio Station WGHQ, for dedicated community service.

Mrs. Mildred Young introduced Mrs. Smith to chapter members, noting her numerous community services to such groups as the Rhinebeck Historical Society, the Republican Club, Eastern Star, American Legion Auxiliary, Fire Department Auxiliary, Rhinebeck Grange, Northern Dutchess Hospital Auxiliary, Ferncliff Nursing home, and the Civil Defense organization.

Mrs. Rosalind DeLamater presented Mrs. Smith with a bouquet of red roses on behalf of the chapter and Councilwoman Jane Gallo presented Mrs. Smith with a citation from the Town of Rhinebeck.

Noting the current danger that state officials may close the maternity and pediatric services in Northern Dutchess Hospital, members were urged to write to state legislators to "oppose this extremely unwise proposal, with grave danger to all the people served by the hospital."

GOOD CITIZEN HONORED

Ulster County Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago (L) presents an Ulster County Good Citizen Award to Laurel DiMico of Hanratty Street, a part-time worker in the legislature office. Miss DiMico, riding with her brother in a car, came upon an accident in which a young girl was injured while bike riding. Miss DiMico put her in the back seat of the car and administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to restore her breathing while on the way to the hospital. (Freeman photo)

Business News Today

Dividend, Merger For First Empire

HIGHLAND
The board of directors of First Empire State Corporation, at its quarterly meeting, set a new regular dividend rate on the corporation's common shares.

The new rate is 25¢ per quarter and will commence with the dividend to be paid Dec. 22 to stockholders of record Dec. 1. The prior rate was 37½¢ per quarter. On an annual basis, the new rate is $1 per share and the prior rate was $1.50.

Charles R. Diebold, president and chief executive officer of First Empire, stated that given the present state of the capital market, internal capital accumulation is the soundest approach to meeting corporate goals. It "just makes good sense" to retain more of First Empire's earnings at this time, he added.

The corporation also announced: "Another step taken by the directors to enhance the position of First Empire's banking subsidiaries was the approval of a merger of its Highland subsidiary, The First National Bank of Highland, into Manufacturers and Traders Trust Company, the corporation's Buffalo-based lead bank. This merger will increase the capital and number of services available to meet the demands of First National's growing and profitable market in the Mid-Hudson Valley of New York State. The Highland bank now has six offices and its total assets were $103 million on September 30, 1975, an $18 million increase since its acquisition in 1972. During that period, the bank also had an outstanding earnings growth.

"The previously announced merger of First Empire Bank-New York into M & T Bank is expected to be completed in 1976. The combined bank will offer increased banking services to First Empire Bank-New York's present customers. Both mergers require the approval of bank supervisory authorities.

"The mergers and the dividend action will also support the continued growth and profitability of M & T Bank, as well as its aggressive position in the Western New York market."

What Bagels?

Artist Howard Slotnick shows some prospective contestants the ground rules for a "Go on a Thanksgiving Bagel Hunt" contest being conducted by Mr. Bagel in the Mammoth Mall on Route 9W North. The object of the contest is to find the most bagels in the picture drawn by Slotnick, of Signs 'n Designs, with the winner getting a $25 first prize and the 10 runners-up being paid off in bagels. Contest closes Nov. 29, with winners announced Dec. 3.

IBM and Xerox Continue Their Battle

Business News Today

ARMONK
Like two behemoths slugging it out in slow motion, International Business Machines Corp. and Xerox Corp. continue to trade courtroom punches.
The first two roundhouses, in 1970 and 1973, were launched by Xerox when IBM introduced office copying machines, claiming patent infringements.
The latest jab was delivered when IBM brought a counter-suit claiming Xerox is using certain quality improvement features in its copy machines infringing on U.S. and Canadian patent rights. When Xerox said it had obtained rights, IBM answered they were invalid.

So far, the only winners in the five-year-old legalistic maneuvering are the fleets of corporate attorneys retained to stave off impending court decision and research the opponents' weak points, following the old maxim, "The best defense is a good offense."

The latest suit brought by IBM concerned a process described as giving improved quality reproductions while extending the life of the photoconductive surface in machines. The corporation claimed the process is used in two models and in two Xerox models 4000 and 4500. No dollar amount was specified, as the suit asks for injunctions against Xerox and damages.

Spokesmen added that licenses given Xerox and cited by that corporation are earlier agreements and not applicable.
Parallels of both Xerox suits and the IBM suits have been filed in Canada Federal courts in New York City, Denver and Ottawa will hear testimony.
In New York Chief District Judge David N. Edelstein presides over the Justice Department's computer monopoly case against IBM and also handles pretrial work in Xerox suits against IBM.

New Line Offered

KINGSTON
A new line of U.S.-made propane products is being introduced this fall by Fowler & Keith Hardware, 104 Smith Avenue, Kingston, according to Steve Aaron.
The new products are the Vestergaard propane stove, the Vestergaard propane lamp and the Vestergaard propane Catalytic Heater.
A new design (utility and design patents are pending) enables the Vestergaard propane stove to cover a wide variety of needs in one basic mode.

It is compact, full-size, and has widely spread burners to handle large pots and pans. It closes up to 9 1/2 by 16 inches; opens to full size—12 by 26 inches. Its two 10,000 BTU burners are spaced 11 inches apart. Both burner controls work fully independently of each other.
The Vestergaard Propane Lamp is a double-mantle lantern with 200 candlepower. The Vestergaard Propane Heater will be available as a single-mantle lantern as well, with 100 candlepower.

A lot of heat without a lot of heater is the promise of the Vestergaard Propane Heater. Its size is 7" x 7 1/4". It is the only catalytic 2500 BTU heater, and it is accurately rated. Because of its BTU rating it can run for eight hours (or through a good night of sleep) on one cylinder of propane.

All of the Vestergaard products will come with a guarantee offering repairs or replacements without charge for two years on the entire product, and for 10 years on the burners.

Forest Missing One Tree

KINGSTON
Unable to see the trees for the forest, the Freeman's account of Christmas Clubs in the county somehow managed to circumvent a giant redwood—Kingston Trust Company, "The Bank."

Kingston Trust, with eight branches in Ulster County, has a Christmas Club membership of about 5,000 accounts, according to Richard Craig, and recorded November payments of $1,017,535 to county accounts alone. The Bank has a Dutchess branch, as well.

The $1 million plus figure, largest in the county (Bankers' Trust quoted $1.1 million in Ulster and Orange), adds a hefty slice to liquid assets designated to be spent within the next month. Craig estimated a total county figure of more than $3 million mailed out in Christmas Club checks recently.

The Latest Jet From Boeing Is An Airborne Hot Rod

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bob-tailed version of the Boeing 747 jumbo jet is about to make aviation history — and help revolutionize international air travel — with the longest, loftiest nonstop flights ever made by an airliner.

The new plane, called the 747SP, was designed as a "special performance" offspring of the 747. Although it is nearly 50 feet shorter, Boeing says the SP can fly higher, farther and faster than either its predecessor or any other jumbo jet in the world.

It will, the company hopes, shave off hours of flight times and eliminate refueling stops on many of the world's intercontinental air routes.

Pan American World Airways — as usual, the first customer in line for a new Boeing plane — hopes the 747SP will help overcome its grave financial difficulties.

Boeing showed off its new craft this Wednesday (Nov. 12) with the world's first nonstop airliner flight from New York to Tokyo, a 6,927-mile route that now requires one refueling stop and lasts about 17 hours.

That was a record nonstop distance for a jetliner loaded with passengers, and the flying time was to be just 14 hours.

The test flight began a month-long tour of 18 nations in Europe, the Far East, Africa and Latin America to introduce the 747SP. The tour plane bears Boeing's bright red, white, blue and silver colors.

Besides Pan Am, which is buying five SPs, South Africa has ordered six of the $32 million jets for its airline, Iran Air has ordered three and Syrian Arab Airlines two.

The 747 and its mini-jumbo offspring look much alike, yet at the same time strangely different.

Both stand three stories tall with cargo holds on the first deck, main passenger cabin on the second and the distinctive hump atop the fuselage forming a third level housing the cockpit and either seats or a first class lounge.

Both have the same huge swept-back wings with a span of 196 feet. Both have massive tricycle landing gear with 18 tires, four enormous engines and a towering tail.

Put them side-by-side, however, and the differences snap into focus.

The third deck hump on the stubby 747SP reaches farther back, ending over the wings rather than in front of them. The rear section of the fuselage looks as though a giant hand had squeezed the graceful taper of the original 747 down to a narrow tube.

The looks are different because of a 47-foot reduction in the original jet's length. Fuselage sections of about equal length were removed on either side of the wings. Even with its shorter cabin the SP is 184 feet from nose to tail.

Inside, the new plane has about 100 fewer seats than the full-size 747, which carries 360 to 490 passengers.

Reducing the body length, redesigning the wings and lightening the landing gear cut 50,000 pounds from the 710,000-pound gross weight of the original 747 and reduced its drag.

But with the same four engines as the bigger 747, each producing 47,000 pounds of thrust, the new plane is a kind of airborne hot rod — shorter takeoff, longer range, higher speed, improved fuel economy and a maximum altitude of 45,000 feet, nearly a mile higher than any other airliner.

Boeing says the 747SP will be able to cruise at 550 to 600 miles per hour. Other planes can go as fast but rarely have the chance because they travel at lower altitudes in congested traffic.

"The only plane a 747SP should have to fly behind is another SP," said Joseph Sutter, chief of Boeing's 747 division.

Boeing shrank its 747 to let airlines cut operating costs, eliminate excess capacity and improve performance.

The company believes some airlines will buy the new plane for routes that have too many passengers for conventional jets, yet too few for a full-sized 747. Others, company officials predict, will buy it for routes where range or the ability to take off from short runways is important.

A big attraction for Pan Am will be the mini-jumbo's ability to open up pioneering nonstop routes in overseas travel.

One official said Pan Am hopes to use the 747SP to lure a lion's share of traffic on the booming New York-Tokyo run from two competitors.

Northwest and Japan Air Lines, which still will have one-stop flights.

"What this plane does for us is something it may not do for Delta or Eastern," he said. "It's going to open up nonstop service in several long distance markets around the world."

"It's something we could have used years ago, and it's coming none too soon."

During its world tour, the 747SP will take off in the thin air of lofty Mexico City for the first nonstop jetliner flight from there to a European capital, in this case Belgrade, 7,140 miles away.

Boeing expects the new plane to fly a maximum of about 7,200 miles with a full passenger load. A spokesman for McDonnell-Douglas Corp., whose DC10 jumbo jet may be the SP's chief competitor, says the new Boeing's range outdistances the DC10 by about 150 miles.

The DC10 holds the record for the longest nonstop flight by an unloaded jetliner — 7,568 miles from Honolulu to Buenos Aires, set in 1972 with just 36 persons aboard. Boeing said a similarly empty 747SP could probably beat that mark by 600 miles.

Battling Antarctica to Reclaim Aircraft

HONOLULU (UPI) — Antarctica would not, on the surface, seem to be a place to set up an aircraft factory.

However, a team of 50 engineers and technicians are spending $3 million in a race against the calendar in the Antarctic "summer" of 30-below zero weather to rebuild two crashed transport planes on an Antarctic plateau and fly them back to New Zealand.

Navy Capt. Eugene W. Van Wreeth said the two C-130 jet props, which crashed 650 miles east of the American base at McMurdo Jan. 15, were valued at $19 million.

One of the big Hercules transports lost both its engines and the center section of the right wing when a jet assistance takeoff pod exploded just before the plane became airborne. The second C-130, which flew in to rescue the crew of the first, smashed its nose section taking off.

All those aboard both planes, which included the members of a French scientific expedition, escaped without injury.

Some 50 engineers, technicians and members of the support party flew to the crash site Nov. 1. Now, working in two twelve-hour shifts for the next 55 days, they hope to rebuild both planes and fly them back to McMurdo and then 2,100 miles farther on to New Zealand.

"The mean temperature in the area is about 30 below zero and the altitude is more than 7,000 feet," Captain Van Wreeth said. "The exact spot is about equidistant from the American base at McMurdo and the Soviet base of Vostok at the South Magnetic pole where the lowest temperature in the world — 126.9 degrees below zero Fahrenheit — has been recorded."

Van Wreeth, who is charge of the Navy's Antarctic support program, admitted that he had been dubious about the chances of ever getting the two planes off the glacial plateau.

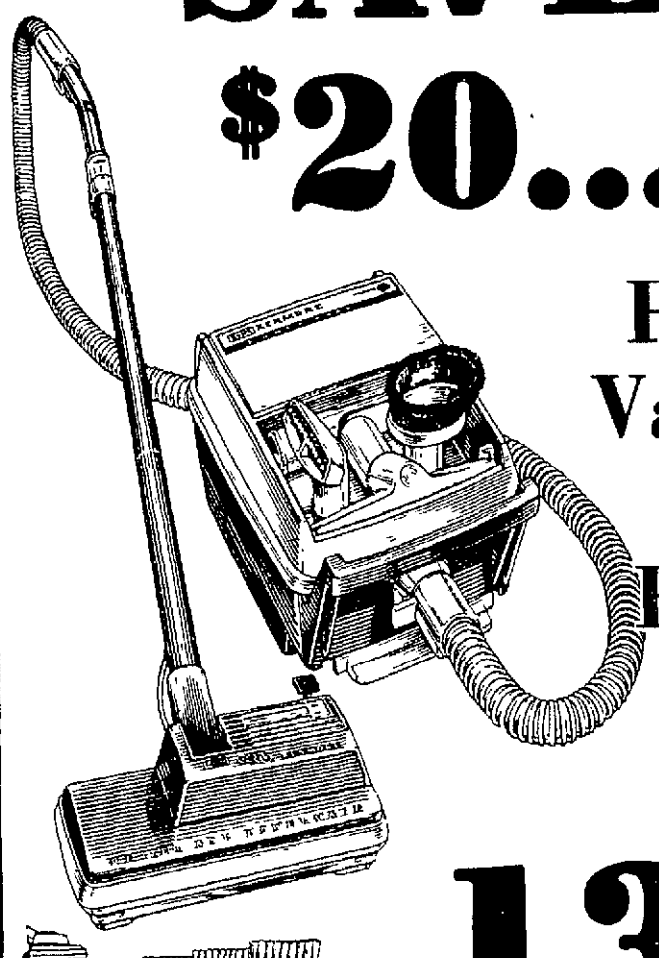

"The one plane with the collapsed nose gear is the least damaged, and we are going to concentrate on it," he said. "The other C-130 is missing its entire right wing and both engines. Lockheed has fabricated a whole new center section and the 25 civilian engineers and technicians are going to rebuild this aircraft right there."

Shortly after the two crashes the Navy and Lockheed engineers made a feasibility study of the situation and decided the gamble was worth the effort. The 25 navy people from Cherry Point flew in Nov. 1 to set up the camp. Their first job was to carve out a skiway. One bulldozer was at the site. Another and a spare blade were to be flown in to fashion the skiway so supplies and personnel can be ferried in and out of the site.

"We hope to have everything going full tilt by Nov. 15," Capt. Van Wreeth explained during a stopover in Honolulu en route to McMurdo. "We then estimate we have 55 days from mid-November to mid-January to do the job."

Lions Governor Visits

Caruso Is 'Roast' Chairman

KINGSTON Celestino (Chil) Caruso is serving as chairman of the Al Spada Roast on Saturday, Dec. 6, at the Granit Hotel, and Len Cane, executive vice president of the Ulster County Chamber of Commerce, will be master of ceremonies.

The announcements were made by Mark Kachigian, president of the United Way of Ulster County, which will benefit from the proceeds of the roast.

Tony Alecca is serving as co-chairman and Tony Bell as publicity chairman for the program, which begins at 7 p.m.

Cane will be coordinating a program which will include roasters Dr. Gerald Gorman, Ray Garraghan, Jack Turk, H. Clark Bell, Sparky Greco, Jimmy Amendola, Curtis Vandermark, Evelyn Corsones, Jim Thompson, Doris Mulvin and Jim Gilpatrick. Two additional "surprise roasters" will also be announced.

Tickets are available at the United Way office, Arace Electronics, Spada's Sport Shop, Shamrock Tavern, Kingston Plaza Barber Shop, the Jury Box and Nekos Pharmacy in Kingston; at the Flamingo Restaurant and Buono's Restaurant in Saugerties; at the Stone Ridge Hardware, at the Coachman Diner and D and M Hardware in Ellenville; and at the Plaza Diner and John Perrone's Nationwide Insurance office in New Paltz. Early reservations are suggested.

Wallkill Woman Is Reelected

NIAGARA FALLS Mrs. Rosalyn Schoonmaker, wife of a Wallkill apple grower, has been reelected to an eighth term as chairman of the New York Farm Bureau's State Women's Committee.

The election took place at the organization's annual meeting recently at Niagara Falls.

As committee chairman, Mrs. Schoonmaker also serves on the New York Farm Bureau's Board of Directors. In 1974 she was also elected to the Women's Committee of the American Farm Bureau Federation. She is also a voting delegate of Associated Country Women in the World.

Prior to her first election in 1968, she served six years as a member of the State Women's Committee, representing county Farm Bureau women's committees in the lower Hudson Valley.

She is a past president of the Wallkill Women's Club and secretary of the New Hurley

Reformed Church. Her husband operates a 100-acre apple farm, including a cold storage facility and commercial packing house. They have two children, Marty Lynn and Richard

Alan.

The three-day New York Farm Bureau annual meeting drew more than 700 farmers and wives from the state's 52 agricultural counties for sessions aimed at ratification of 1976 State Farm Bureau policy, conferences dealing with current concerns to the farm and rural communities, election of officers and recognition of Farm Bureau leadership.

Marbletown Artists Group . . . Winter Show Reflects Holiday

WEST PARK
A holiday flavor will mark the opening reception of the Marbletown Artists Association's Winter Show

Sunday, Nov. 23, from 2 to 5 p.m. The reception to which the public is invited, will be held in the Association's cooperative galleries on the grounds of Wildwyck Village in West Park.

On display in the main gallery will be a colorful presentation of the works of many local artists and craftspeople including a wide variety of paintings, drawings, weavings, photographs, prints, and sculptures in wood, metal, ceramic and acrylic

Opening concurrently in the adjoining gallery will be a show entitled "Just for Fun" featuring the toys and sculptures of David Osmolski. One of the highlights of the upcoming holiday season will be the warm homey charm of the handcrafted wooden cars, planes, and trucks created by Osmolski; they are sure to delight children of all ages. Osmolski uses native northern pine, spruce and cedar to carve his fanciful machines. Many of the designs currently on display were originally made for his own son on past holidays.

In addition to his wooden toys, Osmolski also will present his "creative creatures." These fanciful animal sculptures, made from found metal objects, will captivate both young and old alike.

The M.A.A. Winter show and the exhibit by Osmolski will remain open through January. The cooperative galleries of the Marbletown Artists Association are open daily, afternoons and evenings, including weekends; and are located on the upper level of Wildwyck Village, Route 9W, West Park, nine miles south of Kingston. Purchases may be made at any time.

"The Red Baron's Flying Machine" is one of many handcrafted wooden toys that will captivate children of all ages in David Osmolski's "Just for Fun" at Wildwyck Village. His show is opening concurrently with the Marbletown Artists Association's Winter Show. Both will run through January.

'Just for Fun'

Bulldozers, logging trucks, flatbed trailers constructed from native northern pine and spruce will provide hours of enjoyment for any child. David Osmolski's imagination seems endless as he creates beautiful wooden toys to delight both children and adults—all featured at the "Just for Fun" show at the Wildwyck Village.

As It Might Have Been

Carolyn and Steve Waligurski of the Hurley Patente Manor, Old Hurley, entertained recently at a candlelight musical as it might have been in 1775, for the benefit of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic. Close to a 100 invited guests toured the old Cornelius Cool manor house, enjoyed the music of the Mid-Hudson Madrigal Singers performing informally in small groups about the house, and tested 18th Century recipes from old Ulster kitchens with their mulled wine and spicy-hot cider. Among those on Mrs. Daniel Terpening's In-Home Concert Committee who planned the event were Mrs. William Ehrsam, Mrs. James DeRose, Mrs. William Askue, Mrs. Robert Updahl, and Mrs. H. Richard Barnett. Mrs. George Bain assisted with the baking as well as Mrs. Bruce Colvin, Mrs. Eleanor Diemer, Mrs. Thomas Horsey, Robert Guenther, Mrs. Amos Newcombe, Mrs. Norman Rafalowsky, Mrs. Alfred Schwab and Mrs. Roland Tonnesen. The Mid-Hudson Madrigal Singers are under the direction of HVP Board member, Dr. Richard Olsen.

Agudas Achim Sisterhood Installs

KINGSTON Officers for 1975-76 were installed and four new members were welcomed during the Paid-Up membership dinner held by the Sisterhood of Agudas Achim.

Marcia Paige, who conducted a brief meeting, expressed her thanks to all workers for their efforts.

Those installed were:

Lorraine Trast, first vice-president; Thelma Weinberger, second vice-president; Muriel Levine, treasurer; Lena Rudolph, financial secretary; Milly Barkin, recording secretary and Harriet Katatsky, corresponding secretary.

The new members included Brenda Fletcher,

Barbara Blas, Nancy Kaufman and Ellen Leifer.

Rabbi Basil Herring spoke on the United Nations recent resolution regarding Zionism and postcards were distributed and a message sent from each member to President Gerald R. Ford asking that support be withdrawn from those countries voting against Israel.

Another highlight of the meeting was a fashion show with Goldman's and The Unique Boutique exhibiting styles suitable for the mature and junior figures. Irene Klein served as commentator.

A notable display of jewelry by the proprietors of "Rings & Things," — Linda Svirsky and Sue Simon — also was featured.

Housewifery How Some Rate Their Own Roles

NEW YORK (UPI) — How many times have we heard a woman describe herself as "just a housewife?" Sometimes she puts herself down with her apologetic tone, sometimes she's defiant and proud of her role.

Then there's the juggler. She's the woman who fills the dual role of housewife and woman working full or part time outside the home. About three fifths of all women workers in the United States fit in this double role; untold millions more do so in other countries.

Whether the woman with an outside job is happier than the "just a housewife" is something probably as individual as fingerprints. How many of us with jobs have not on occasion, especially Monday, wished that the office didn't have to beckon? How many times in a crisis we have longed for an extra pair of hands, an extra pound of strength!

Or, how many times have we sighed that if we were just rich enough, we could have our cake and eat it too — the rewarding career and the wherewithal to hire someone else to do the dirty work?

But any wife who works, whether of necessity or desire, should listen to how some of her "just a housewife" sisters feel about their roles.

The attitude of dissatisfaction dominates, says one woman who has researched the matter.

Dr. Ann Oakley, a research officer at Bedford College, the University of London, has studied attitudes toward housework in a series of interviews with 40 London homemakers. "Although the sample . . . is a British one," she says, "the housewife's situation is not fundamentally different in other modern industrialized societies."

Ms. Oakley, who writes extensively on women's roles, has published her housewife study in "The Sociology of Housework" (Patheon Books, New York).

"The major finding," she concludes, is that "dissatisfaction with housework predominates."

Seventy per cent were "dissatisfied," putting to rest "the idea that only a tiny minority of women are discontented housewives."

Monotony was a common experience, the author found. Three quarters of the sample reported it. As one woman said, "It's the feeling that although you've done the job for today, you've still got to do it tomorrow . . ."

Loneliness was a frequent complaint. Most of those dissatisfied with housework reported a low level of social interaction with others. This parallels, Ms. Oakley concluded, the finding from industrial sociology that "the opportunity (for) social relationships with other workers is one of the most prized aspects of any job."

Autonomy was the most highly valued dimension of the housewife role. "Being one's own boss," a phrase used by nearly half the women, "and exercising control over pace of work is a facet . . . which contrasts favorably with employment work."

Housework was the most disliked aspect of housewifery. Three fourths of the group disliked ironing most, with "washing up" (doing dishes and the like) running second. As a former fashion model put it, "I just can't bear mucking around with dirty greasy things."

Cleaning ran third in the disliked list and least disliked was cooking; the author figures because cooking had creative potential. Women liked to experiment, try new recipes.

Many of the women commented on the "low status" of the housewife role, the "trivialization" of the work.

Ms. Oakley noted that any way you add it up, the housewife has a long working week; the average in her sample was 77 hours, with a range of 48 (the housewife with a fulltime job) to 105.

And to all those women with outside jobs who wish to be "just a housewife," better reconsider. Ms. Oakley found that all the women who had held high status jobs in the past (computer programmer, fashion model) were dissatisfied in present roles.

UCCC Nursing Graduates Excel

STONE RIDGE
Thirty seven graduates of the fifth Associate Degree Nursing class at Ulster County Community College have excelled on the New York State Board Licensing Examination for their R.N. licensure.

The mean or average scores for the UCCC graduates were above the combined mean scores reported for all Nursing program students, including those in baccalaureate and other associate degree programs in New York State.

President Robert T. Brown said that "we're proud of the success of our Nursing graduates on these state examinations and feel it speaks highly for our program at the College and the faculty and students involved in it."

The 37 UCCC Nursing graduates excelled on the state examination consisting of five parts — Medical, Surgical, Obstetrical, Child Health and Psychiatric Nursing.

Evelyn M. Lyke, the chairperson of the Nursing Department at UCCC, said the UCCC graduates taking the New York State examination did not represent all of the Ulster graduates.

"A number of our graduates go to other states for employment," she explained, "and take their licensing examination in those states."

Ms. Lyke pointed out that the UCCC nursing graduates are eligible to take the licensing examinations offered by any of the states.

Associate Professor Lyke said she wanted to congratulate the 37 UCCC graduates who had passed the R.N. licensing examination in New York State. "Everyone in the Nursing Department is pleased with their success," she added.

The former UCCC students who now are professional registered nurses include from these areas:

New Paltz — Pamela Anderson, Martha Schmalz.
West Hurley — Kim

Fusaro, Hope Duffy.

Accord — Donald Sack, Susan Matson, Carol Maglicco.

Saugerties — Sally Carson, Constance Marcus, Linda Taylor.

Kingston — Malvina Berinato, Louis Bruneau, Linda Lane, Lorraine Lasher, Alpha Leo, Janice Rogers, Roberta Sprague, Barbara Terpening, Elsie Kent.

Rhinebeck — Eileen Healy. Shandaken — Tanya Smith.

Kerhonkson — Ursula Bilyeu.

Bearsville — Nona Craig.

Samsonville — MaryAnn Arnold.

West Park — Lorraine Krasinski.

Ulster Park — Theresa Martin.

Woodstock — Janine Mower, Katherine Iatridis. Clintondale — Marie Vaccaro.

High Falls — Julia Corcoran, Margaret Hartmann. Port Ewen — Nancy Morgan.

Hurley — Mary Markes. Highland — Rosa Adams. West Camp — Kathleen Van Tassel.

Tillon — Dianna Wilson. Newburgh — Eileen Bowler.

Redstockings at the WW Center

WOODSTOCK
Members of the New Paltz and New York-based radical feminist group the REDSTOCKINGS will speak Friday, Nov. 21, at the Woodstock Woman's Center, 59A Tinker Street, Woodstock.

One of the earliest organized feminist groups and one of the first to adopt and promote the technique of consciousness-raising, the Redstockings did some of the critical pioneer work in the women's movement. After a long period of inactivity, during which the group dissolved, Redstockings has come back to life. In May of this year, the group touched off a serious controversy within the movement when it published a press release about Gloria Steinem's involvement with the CIA and the role of Ms. Magazine within the feminist movement. Shortly thereafter, Redstockings published Feminist Revolution, a comprehensive 200-page collection of articles, including the Steinem release, about the past eight years of the women's movement. The book, in preparation since 1973, was intended to make public certain political information and to describe organizational patterns and theoretical problems that have prevented the movement from pursuing a truly radical course. Redstockings members will discuss and expand on some of this material when they speak about "The Women's Movement: Learning From the First Eight Years" this Friday at the Woman's Center. All women are welcome to the 8:30 p.m. program. An admission fee will be charged.

In honor of its first full year in operation, the Woodstock Women's Center will sponsor a pot-luck supper and anniversary party Saturday, Nov. 29, beginning at 7 p.m. Bring a dish and join us in celebrating the existence of this women's space," a spokesperson said.

The open rap sessions for women begun last month at the Center will continue Thursday at 8 p.m. No topic has been announced for this week's discussion.

Ms. Lyke pointed out that

Polish Polka Festival Sunday

KINGSTON
The White Eagle Benevolent Society, Inc., will sponsor a Polish Polka Festival on Sunday, November 23, at the White Eagle Hall, Delaware Avenue, from 2 p.m. until 6 p.m.

This event is only for the Society members and their guests.

The Festival will feature Jolly Joe and his sons playing the Polkas as well as other entertainment including the Happy Children, the nation's No. 1 polka dancing group from East Lyme, Conn., along with John and Helen Rymaszewski from Huntington, L.I., the Harvest Moon Polka champions.

This is the first event of Polish festivities to be held by the society and it appears at this time member interest is high with a large turnout expected.

Martindale Chamber Concert

WOODSTOCK
The Martindale Chamber Winds will play the first concert of the 1975-76 season projected for the Woodstock Artists Association on Sunday, Nov. 23, at 8 p.m.

Performers will include Jaqui Steltz, flute; Kathy Karlsen, oboe; James McCroarty, clarinet; Richard Jones, French horn and Eric Goldberg, bassoon.

It promises to be a pleasing evening of returning classical music to Woodstock at the WAA with works by Debussy, Ginastera, William Byrd, Beethoven, Scott among others.

Help for Retirees Through Food Co-Ops

Food co-ops can help retirees on fixed incomes solve budget problems, says Art Danforth, secretary-treasurer of the Co-operative League of the USA. Until now, co-ops' most enthusiastic supporters generally have been young people, for obvious reasons. Many have

Thanks to you

It's working

The United Way

large families and/or low incomes. Presumably they also have the strength and stamina to cope with co-op pickup and distribution chores. This is one area in which retired persons might need help.

Harry Leichter, organizer of the Dale City, Va., Food Buyers Association, suggests turning to able-bodied neighbors, including teenagers, for aid in transporting and distributing heavy cases of food.

A food co-op consists of a group, usually about 15 to 20 families, who get together to buy food in bulk at wholesale prices. Members are responsible for picking up, sorting, weighing, packaging or bagging where necessary, and distributing the food.

Payment generally is required in cash in advance. A lot of time and hard work is involved, said Leichter in an article in the "AARP News Bulletin," a publication of the American Association of Retired Persons.

Many co-op members say the effort pays off in substantial savings and better quality food than they are accustomed to buying at retail stores.

Leichter says 20 families is the ideal number for a neighborhood co-op, although the larger the group, the lower the prices.

He also advises: Decide what you want to order, then shop wholesalers for the best prices. Be prepared to borrow or lease a truck if none of your members has a vehicle suitable for bulk pickups and delivery to a distribution center where each family must claim his purchases and pay for them.

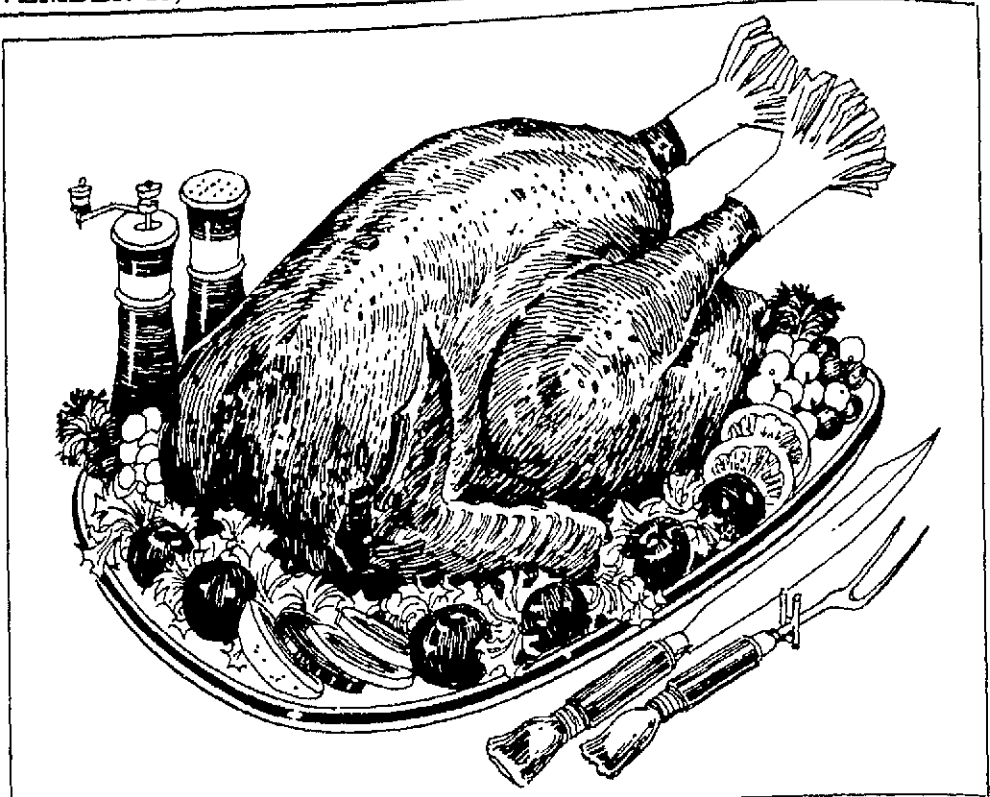

Churches, community centers, schools or even the garage or basement of a member's home are possibilities for rentfree distribution centers.

Retirees with business experience would be good choices as coordinators and bookkeeper-treasurers.

Volunteers also should be recruited to take orders, distribute food and keep records.

To cover operating expenses, establish an annual membership fee that may be as low as $4 a family. A co-op needs money for phone calls, scales, mimeograph supplies, gas, possible legal fees and truck rental fee, if you cannot borrow a delivery vehicle.

The first step, though, should be a check with your state tax office to determine what permits and license are required, and whether a sales tax or taxes must be collected.

Attractive Turkey Prices for That Holiday Feast

ALBANY

Turkey, the traditional fare for the Thanksgiving holiday, will be featured in retail stores at attractive prices this week, according to Commissioner John S. Dyson of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

The Department's Consumer and Market Information Service reports that frozen turkeys, depending on size and grade, will range in price from 55c to 70c, while fresh turkeys will likely be available from 89c to 99c. Other poultry items on special, here and there, will be geese from $1.25 to $1.35, ducks from 85c to 89c, roasting chicken from 68c to 90c, and broilers and fryers in the vicinity of 60c.

Among the economical beef items to look for are ground chuck from 85c to 99c, ground beef as low as 73c, frankfurters in the area of 99c and short ribs in the neighborhood of 88c. Steaks on feature will be sirloin steak from $1.65 to $1.78, round steak from $1.70 to $1.88 and chuck steak from 77c to $1.38, depending on cut and trim. Attractively priced roasts will be standing rib roast from $1.49 to $1.79, chuck roast from 79c to $1.38, shoulder roast from 95c to $1.44, and round roast from $1.49 to $1.99.

There will be a limited assortment of pork items worth focusing your attention on such as whole smoked ham from $1.18 to $1.39, smoked ham butt from $1.29 to $1.39, smoked ham shank from $1.18 to $1.39, smoked ham center slice from $1.59 to $1.89, pork loin — loin end from $1.35 to $1.44, pork chop combination center chop and rib end from $1.34 to $1.39, and sausage, depending on type, from 85c to $1.59.

Lamb and veal will be on special in a couple of areas. In the central area look for leg of lamb at $1.49, rib lamb chops at $1.88, loin lamb chops at $1.98, and shoulder lamb chops at $1.29. And, in the western area, leg of veal will be 95c and rump of veal $1.09.

Nursery School Parent Night

KINGSTON

Fair Street Nursery School's first Parent Night will be held Thursday, Nov. 20 at 8 p.m. at the school. Mrs. Freida Dinges, president of the Board of Directors, will preside.

Two topics are on the agenda for discussion. Mrs. Barbara Bonder, a teacher at Fair Street School, will summarize a two-day conference she recently attended on Dr. Jean Piaget's theory of developmental stages of early childhood, and show a film strip demonstrating the concepts revealed by Piaget's observation and study of his own children's growth and mental development.

Mrs. Peggie Mabie who teaches at the Campus School at the State University, New Paltz, will be the other speaker, presenting Dr. Catherine Stern's Structural Arithmetic. This is a method of presenting basic mathematical facts about our number system concretely. Dr. Stern's carefully structured games include an element of discovery, and enhance understanding of numbers and arithmetic combinations. Mrs. Mabie will also show a film demonstrating the use of Dr. Stern's Structural Arithmetic materials. The materials themselves may be seen as they are in use at Fair Street Nursery School.

A Parent Representative will be elected from each class to serve for a year on the Board of Directors.

Losing Their Sleep While Single Swings

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I live in a beautiful apartment complex. Recently, the apartment directly above us was rented to a young bachelor. This guy brings his girl friends home to spend the night with him. Since his bedroom is directly above ours, we are sometimes jolted wide awake at 2 or 3 a.m. by the sounds of their amorous activities.

We are in our late 20s and are not prudes, but we're tired of being awakened, losing sleep and feeling as though the ceiling will come down on us at any moment.

I say my husband should have a man-to-man talk with the guy. He says the guy probably doesn't care who hears him. We'll go to the manager of the complex only as a last resort. We love our apartment and don't want to move, but we'd like some uninterrupted sleep.

How should we handle this?

TWO SLEEPY PEOPLE

DEAR SLEEPY: Even if your neighbor doesn't care who hears him, he has no right to disturb you. Make a tape recording of the bedroom bedlam and have your husband present it to him as evidence. And if that doesn't work, play it for the manager. Sweet dreams.

DEAR ABBY: Do you believe in kissing on the first date? It seems to me that any guy who takes out a girl and spends his hard-earned money to show her a good time should be entitled to a goodnight kiss.

DISGUSTED WITH WOMEN

DEAR DISGUSTED: A kiss should not be expected in return for an evening's entertainment or anything else. It's strictly a voluntary show of real affection. And if two people feel like kissing on the first date — I say, why not?

DEAR ABBY: I love to cook and entertain, but it irritates me no end when after going to a lot of trouble to prepare a lovely company meal, a guest just picks at the food or says, "Sorry, I can't eat that," or, "No dessert for me, please."

Don't you think calorie-counters should show a little consideration for the hostess, enjoy whatever is served and diet at home?

ANNOYED HOSTESS

DEAR ANNOYED: Not pressing food on calorie counters is as inexcusable as pressing alcohol on an alcoholic. Many people refuse dinner invitations to avoid the possibility of being forced to eat things they shouldn't just to please the hostess.

Staying at home leads to loneliness and depression, which in turn causes many people to eat out of self-pity.

So here's a plea to well-meaning hostesses: Consider calorie counters when you entertain. Have plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables, and DON'T ever point out that someone is eating very little, should you notice it.

DEAR ABBY: I am presently dating a divorced woman who has a small child. When we go out, am I expected to pay the babysitter?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: If she "expects" you to pay the sitter, she's presumptuous. But if you can afford it, it would be generous to offer.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20c) envelope.

Upcoming Show

WOODSTOCK

An exhibition featuring pen and ink drawings and pastel still lifes by Barry Alan Victor marks the upcoming show at the Ann Leonard Gallery in Woodstock, beginning Nov. 22 through Dec. 16.

With the resurgence of representational art, Victor's black and white ink drawings, a genre that had lessened in interest in recent years, are sure to find a renewed acceptance. Viewers also will be interested to observe the two divergent styles of painting of one man.

Victor's black and white drawings are meticulously drawn and show a virtuosity that had long been in decline. Spare, yet dynamic, the subject matter is essentially landscape.

The pastel still lifes, on the other hand, are lushly drawn in extraordinarily rich color tones. Vibrant and sensuous, they make a distinct contrast to the black and white drawings.

The public is invited to the opening all day Saturday, Nov. 22, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Free refreshments will be served. The Ann Leonard Gallery is open daily from 10 to 6 p.m.

Deck The Halls

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas at Hurley Reformed Church in preparation for the annual Christmas Bazaar scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 22. Here Youth Group members Kenneth Schoonmaker, Amy Bellows, Wayzetta Stickle and Sally Nicholas (R) "deck the hall" for the upcoming event. The unique shops and Christmas Tree Lane and Snowflake Alley will be open from 10 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon, featuring handmade items, Yule decorations, gifts, home baked goodies and many others. Santa also will make an appearance and pose for pictures with the small fry. Another highlight will be a luncheon served in the Poinsetta Pantry featuring homemade vegetable soup, sandwiches and desserts. The public is invited to the little white church on Old Route 209, Hurley, to visit the shops on the "new streets" in Christmas town. (Freeman photo)

Rhinebeck Exhibit

RHINEBECK Mrs. Karin W. Bevan and Mrs. Marjorie B. Wheeler, art teachers in the Rhinebeck schools, are exhibiting their own original paintings now through Nov. 28 at the Rhinebeck Savings Bank.

Mrs. Bevan will display her oil and acrylic paintings while Mrs. Wheeler will exhibit watercolors.

Mrs. Bevan, a native of Hyde Park, attended Hyde Park schools and received her B.S. and M.S. at State University College at New Paltz. This is her eighth year of teaching at Rhinebeck Central High School and she previously taught for eight years in Hyde Park. She is a member of the R.T.A., New York State Teachers Association and the NEA Teachers Associations. She also is a member of Alpha Zeta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma and a member of the Poughkeepsie Branch of the American Association of University Women.

Mrs. Wheeler, who resides in Clinton Corners, attended State University College at Cortland, New Paltz and also Bard College. She has taught art for the past 10 years at Rhinebeck Central School and is a member of the Rhinebeck Teachers Association, the New York State Art Teachers Association, the National Education Association and Delta Kappa Gamma.

Rose Society

HURLEY

The annual Christmas program and sale of Mid-Hudson Rose Society scheduled for Wednesday, Dec. 3, 7 p.m., will feature a special Christmas story, "The Little One," by Mr. and Mrs. Victor Fletcher, of Saugerties and a Christmas song fest led by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Kelly of High Falls.

There will be a special sale of home-baked goodies, handmade items, plants and books appropriate for Christmas gifts. The program will take place at the Hurley Reformed Church, Old Route 209, Hurley. Everyone is invited. Admission is free. Refreshments will be served.

Members and friends of Mid-Hudson Rose Society sponsor the Christmas Program and Sale to enable the organization to present an outstanding Rose Show in the month of June each year. The program chairman, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Fletcher, have arranged an interesting evening. They would welcome additional volunteers to assist with the Christmas Sale Dec. 3, at 7 p.m.

Unhappy Home Where Buffalo Roam

CLINTON, Conn. (UPI) — Joseph Rollar may be home on the Connecticut range, but his buffalo roam. Neighbor Barbara Swan is hoping for the last roundup and won't pay her taxes in the meantime.

Barbara Swan is a single parent and mother of three boys who works as a psychiatric aide in Essex when she isn't shuffling buffalo, which she says has been for most of the past eight years.

She has complained long and hard to town officials, the police, and just about anybody who will stand still, but she says nobody will see to it that her neighbor keeps his buffalo fenced in.

Neighbor Rollar is an 83-year-old retiree who says he was making $60,000 a year building houses when he was knee-high to his custom Rolls Royce, and is thus accustomed to dealing with officialdom.

"You can't dance to their tune. It'll make them arrogant," he said.

Rollar's interest in buffalo dates back 39 years when he read a newspaper article about some buffalo being auctioned off. His son then six years old said, "Dad, how come we can't have a buffalo?" Well, sir, Joseph Rollar, just went right on down to the auction and bought two.

Mrs. Swan says Rollar won't fix his fence properly and the buffalo escape like the time last July when she just returned trip.

She had a slight accident in her driveway, but not your usual fender bender. There as big as Buffalo Bill ever said they were stood one bull bison — nudging her car. Her oldest son, Jack, 16, unlimbered his slingshot.

Quickly, Mrs. Swan summoned police, but they were no buffalo police. They got on the horn to Rollar and told him to go get his buffalo. She said he showed up with a flashlight and began calling, "Here 'Buff!' Here 'Buff!'"

To make a short story longer, Mrs. Swan directed the wrangling from a rooftop and finally Buff was back with the rest of the herd.

Mrs. Swan says some people think it's hilarious. She doesn't. Things were compounded last May when two calves were born. The calves, she says, have found a hole in the fence and mosey over to her place.

"The calves' bleating agitates the herd," she said. "It's dangerous for the kids. The herd is very protective. The babies bawl like cats and the herd answers them and gets agitated."

Mrs. Swan has been notified of her delinquent taxes. But she insists the town or somebody do something to keep the buffalo where they belong. Mrs. Swan lives on a private road which may explain the town's apparent reluctance.

Rollar was asked why he would not build a sturdier fence to protect them and he said he's liable if anybody gets hurt — a comment that might not endear him to his insurance agent. Besides he said he thinks the fence is strong enough.

Buyer's Billboard: Snakebane Maybe?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A problem from Fort Walton Beach, Fla.:

"I hope you can help me. We moved here last year after 14 years in Fairfax County, Va.

"My problem is snakes in the backyard. I saw eight in one month — four different kinds I'm not in the yard very often either. Is it possible to buy 'snake repellent'?" I had the library research whether snakes are afraid of anything. The only thing they found out was that snakes are deaf.

"I don't want to kill them as I know they do a lot of good, but they do scare me, and I want to keep them out of the yard. So I'd appreciate if you can find out what I could buy to put all around my fence to keep them out."

It looks as if you may have to learn to live with the snakes. A reptile expert at the Museum of Natural History in the Smithsonian Institution says it is physiologically impossible to repel a snake, and there is no snake repellent on the market that will work.

The expert said snakes have a very sophisticated sense of smell and are not fooled by odors that might scare away other creatures. They also are very difficult to poison, he said.

"She should consider herself lucky," the expert added. "I'd a lot rather have snakes in my yard than rats, mice or some of the other things snakes help keep away."

In general snakes probably are as shy of you as you are of them. It might be wise to use a reference book to try to identify the snakes in your neighborhood so you will know if they are poisonous, and what part they play in the ecological balance of your area.

Consumers Union has tested slow-cookery pots and rated the Presto LCI as not acceptable because of an insufficient margin of safety. It said the low thermostat setting suggested for some recipes in the instruction booklet did not produce hot enough temperatures, and that bacteria growth theoretically could occur.

Presto headquarters in Eau Claire, Wis., said it is conducting its own tests, but has no further comment now on the allegations.

Making a Wheel Is Now a Big Deal

LONDON (UPI) — George Dutton, one of the last of the wheelwrights, looked a bit lost in such distinguished company.

The Lord Mayor of London was there to honor him. Dignitaries in ancient livery spoke glowingly of his craft, which once filled all the world's streets with the rumble of hand-made wheels.

The 74-year-old wheelmaker blushed through the opening ceremonies of an exhibition about wheels and how they were made. Dutton, a simple village craftsman, made most of the objects in the show.

First, you take a 10-year-old elm. Then, you create poetry from wood. And finally, the heart of an oak made the spokes. The result was a wheel.

For thousands of years wheelwrights played a vital part in villages and cities everywhere. They made wheels and the things that ran on them — carts, wagons, coaches.

Then, a mere moment ago, came mass production and the internal combustion engine.

"Henry Ford's masterpiece was everywhere when I was a boy," Dutton said shyly.

"There was still wheelwrighting to be done then, but one could see how things were heading."

"Within our working lives," said Sir Murray Fox, the Lord Mayor, "we have seen the decline and fall of the trade of wheelwright."

To mark its passing the Worshipful Company of Wheelwrights — one of nearly 80 surviving guild companies in the City of London — mounted the exhibition of Dutton's work the other day in a London church.

It holds some 30 models of carts and wagons, things Dutton made full size in his youth and recreated in miniature after his retirement. There are photographs of wheelwrights at work and of Dutton's strangely named tools — spokedogs and travelers, a buzz, a fellow crotch.

Dutton diffidently showed the Lord Mayor a partly-built wheel to demonstrate the complexity of his trade.

The central hub — the nave — was made from elm seasoned for 10 years. Spokes of heart of oak slotted into it at subtle angles, held by rims cut in sections from ash, beech or elm.

All a good wheel's parts locked together as logically as a sonnet. A red-hot iron hoop was hammered onto the rim, then shrunk tight with buckets of water to fit the completed wheel.

Dutton learned a wheelwright's skills from his father and grandfather, both wheelwrights before him. He could not have learned them at a worse time.

Dutton, like most other surviving wheelwrights, had to turn his hand to jobs which were more in demand. He made farm equipment and five-barred gates. He even made coffins. At length he was forced into a job in railway workshops, but in retirement he returned to wheels.

After the ceremonies opening his exhibit Dutton was installed as an honorary Freeman of the Worshipful Company of Wheelwrights, whose splendidly gowned members are wheelwrights in name only.

Livery companies like theirs have an 800-year-long history in the City of London, the semi-independent square mile at London's center. Even now they elect their sheriffs and nominate the Lord Mayor — Sir Murray Fox was once master of the wheelwrights' company.

In 1630, the wheelwrights formed themselves into a powerful guild. Like other livery companies it regulated its own trade "like some super labor union," said W.R. Rogers, the company's clerk.

"But it also kept standards high," Rogers said. "We still have a court which, by our charter of 1670, has to meet quarterly to punish shoddy workmanship."

The power of the guild companies has greatly declined. But most continue as symbolic and social institutions, promoting what remains of their traditional crafts.

Major Survey Is Scheduled

ALBANY

Another step in computerizing agricultural production is underway with the State Department of Agriculture and Markets joining hands with the U.S. Department of Agriculture for a major nationwide survey.

The survey will be made in New York in late November and December by the New York Crop Reporting Service, jointly sponsored. The information gathered, according to statistician Glenn Suter in charge of New York, aids livestock producers, poultrymen and wheat growers in managing production and marketing operations and helps maintain an "orderly food supply for consumers."

Latest estimates of dairy cows, beef cattle, hogs and chickens, expected pig and calf crops, and winter wheat production in 1976 will be based on the survey. Estimates will be available through the New York Crop Reporting Service office in Albany in December for wheat, hogs, and poultry and early February for cattle.

Of particular interest is the change in milk cow numbers and heifers on New York farms. Prices of milk have improved in recent months and feed costs have dropped slightly from a year ago. Northern dairy counties experienced a severe drought this summer that has greatly reduced hay supplies.

The survey results rely on cooperation from thousands of producers who willingly respond to mail questionnaires and participate in personal interviews. Trained enumerators working in this area will be: Elizabeth M. Herring, Ulster; Eleanor J. Martin, Dutchess.

Retiring Farm Official Attacks Ag Community

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The nation's agricultural community has been accused of failing to "understand or help solve the problems of New York and other big cities."

The accusation was made by William Mason, retiring president of the National Association of Farm Broadcasters in a speech delivered to an audience of 360 agricultural communicators and NAFB members recently in Kansas City.

Mason also chastised city dwellers for not understanding or taking steps to help with the problems of the agribusiness community, but emphasized that he was not defending New York City or any big city.

"On the contrary, I want to help the farmer even if that means he should help city people, because life is not a one-way street," Mason told the NAFB convention.

Mason, who daily talks to an audience of rural and urban listeners over WGN, Chicago, said "If farm folk wanted city folk to understand and sympathize with their problems, it is high time that rural America demonstrated positive concern for the plight of their city cousins."

The agribusiness spokesman keyed his remarks to the Bicentennial celebration and the beginning of the 21st year of National Farm City Week, a program begun by concerned leaders representing large segments of both rural and urban America and designed to foster mutual understanding between farmers and city dwellers.

"If someone helps me," Mason said, "I was taught — in the American tradition — that it was incumbent on me to help the other person if the need ever arose, or certainly I could take the time to sit and listen to the other guy's problem, even if I might not be able to do anything about it. It's almost un-American not to do one or the other, or both."

JOE MORGAN GETS GOOD NEWS

Joe Remembers Nellie's Help

NEW YORK (UPI) — The calls were coming so fast, Joe Morgan hardly had a chance to answer them all. He was being swamped. Friends, teammates, sportswriters, everybody was calling to congratulate the little Cincinnati second baseman on being named the National League's MVP.

Finally, after handling an uninterrupted string of calls without let-up for nearly an hour, Joe Morgan placed the receiver back in its cradle momentarily, then picked it up again to make a call of his own.

It was one of those follow-up calls. A week ago, he heard Nellie Fox was a patient at the Baltimore Cancer Research Center in the University of Maryland Hospital and had called the former Chicago White Sox second baseman remembering how Fox, a coach then, had helped him when he was breaking in with Houston Astros nine years ago.

"Did you get that award yet?" Fox, an MVP himself in 1959, had asked.

"No," Morgan had told him. "I just hope I do."

Joe Morgan made a mental note with himself that if he was named MVP, Nellie Fox would be one of the first persons he'd call for more than one reason. That's why he made that follow-up call Tuesday evening.

"When I win an award such as this, my thoughts go back to the people who helped me in

SPORT PARADE

Milton Richman,
UPI Sports Editor

the very beginning, the ones responsible for my becoming the player I am now," said Joe Morgan, explaining one of the reasons behind his second call to Nellie Fox.

"In my first couple of years with Houston after coming up from the minors, Nellie Fox and Bob Lillis were coaches there and they worked with me a great deal. You don't forget things like that especially when they happen to you just coming up the way I was. One thing I always remember Nellie Fox saying to me. 'When you're not hitting, you gotta do something else.' He'd sit and talk to me and harp on that one thing. He'd tell me I couldn't get down in the dumps and let my fielding suffer if I wasn't hitting. That was problem, too. I was used to hitting .330 and .320 in the minors, and then when I came up with Houston and had some trouble hitting, I'd start brooding about it."

Joe Morgan never has forgotten what Nellie Fox told him.

He made himself do more than something else besides hit. He became one of the finest base runners in the league, certainly the most feared; he kept on getting better and better making the double play around second base, and with it all, his power and run production increased as well. He garnished his .327 batting average with 94 rbi's and 17 homers this past season and led the league with 132 walks and 67 stolen bases.

He didn't stop there, either. Morgan grounded into the fewest double plays, only three in 498 times up, and paced all the league's second basemen in fielding with a .986 percentage. Joe Morgan was such a dominant force that the last time he went to bat this year against left-hander Jim Burton of the Red Sox, he snapped that left elbow of his four or five times the way he always does and then singled to center to provide the Reds their first world championship in 35 years. Certainly no other player was more valuable to his team this year than Joe Morgan.

That chicken flap style of moving his left arm up and down Morgan uses when he's hitting and become his trademark and Nellie Fox is responsible for that, too.

"He felt I hit better with my elbow away from my body, so he suggested I try snapping my elbow just to remind me to keep it away," Morgan said. "We were only going to try it for a couple of days, but a couple of days turned into a couple of weeks, a couple of weeks into a couple of months and a couple of months into a couple of years. Now I do it unconsciously. It has helped me a whole lot as far as becoming a better hitter is concerned."

The left-handed hitting Morgan is a rarity in that he is as dangerous against left-handed pitching as he is against right-handers. One of the few bad days he had against a left-hander all year was back in July when he went for the collar against the Mets' Jon Matlack, managing to get the ball out of the infield only once. Matlack ate him up alive.

"Gee, when we see him next time, I'd better pass," Morgan said to Sparky Anderson after that one.

Two minutes later, he was back.

"You know what?" he said, laughing now. "I don't pass nobody."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joe Morgan, the Cincinnati Reds' pint-sized second baseman who has been telling people since he was a teen-ager that size doesn't count in baseball, feels today he has proved his point.

For evidence, he is the winner of the National League's Most Valuable Player Award by a landslide margin.

The 32-year old native of Bonham, Tex., who moved to the West Coast as a boy, received 321½ points in voting by 24 members of the Baseball Writers Association of America to win the award by a wide margin over muscleman Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies who had 154 points. Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates was third with 120 points followed by Johnny Bench and Pete Rose of the Reds with 117 and 114 points respectively.

Morgan received 21½ first-place votes with Rose getting the other 2½. Morgan's 167½ point plurality is the largest in the history of the voting in either league and he is the first second baseman to gain NL MVP honors since Jackie Robinson of Brooklyn in 1949.

Morgan, who signed into the Houston Astros' organization in 1963 because their scout was the only one of several who didn't warn him about his lack of size, emphasized his all-around skills in acknowledging receipt of the award.

"To me, there is more to baseball than just hitting and running," he said. "But winning the award this year over guys who hit more homers or drove in more runs—that proved the man who can play well in every phase of the game still is appreciated."

At the same time, Morgan, whose single off Jim Burton of the Boston Red Sox drove in the Reds' winning run in the ninth inning of the seventh game, admitted, "winning the World Series was greater" than winning the MVP award.

"Don't get me wrong," he said. "I'm really happy about winning the MVP. But it's not the same as winning the World Series. We worked so hard for it so long and then we had to go down to the last inning of the last game of the Series to win it all. How can you beat that for a thrill?"

The 5-foot 7-inch, 155-pound Morgan batted .327, hit 17 homers, drove in 94 runs, scored 107 runs, stole 67 bases and led the league in walks with 132. His combination of skills put unrelenting pressure on the Reds' rivals, setting the stages for long-ball hitters Bench and Tony Perez.

"I have always felt I was a mature person," said Morgan. "Even going back to my high school days I know I can achieve what I set out to do. I always did even when I went away from home as a youngster to start my career in organized baseball."

Luzinski batted .300 with 34 homers and 120 runs batted in while Parker's offensive figures were .308-25-101.

Rounding out the first 10 in the voting were Ted Simmons of the St. Louis Cardinals, Willie Stargell of the Pirates, Al Hrabosky of the Cardinals, Tom Seaver of the New York Mets and Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres.

Fifteen other players received at least one vote in the balloting.

SPORTS TODAY

Time Running Out on Winner?

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Charley Winner, who has seen his New York Jets stumble to the worst defensive record in the National Football League, insisted Tuesday that he won't resign as head coach. There are indications, however, that the decision may be made for him.

"Absolutely not," said Winner sternly when asked if he was considering resigning. "I'm not a quitter and I don't expect anybody on this team to be a quitter. I came here with a feeling of confidence in the ownership and I'm positive in time this club will show results."

But Winner may be running out of time. Club President Phil Ilesin, who indicated just three weeks ago that Winner would be allowed at least to finish out the season—the second on his three-year contract—seems to be changing his stand, especially in light of a 52-19 bombardment by Baltimore last Sunday.

The Jets have lost six in a row and seven of nine games. In their seven losses, they have the Colts more than 80 points last week and on three other occasions went over the 40-point mark. The 293 points they have surrendered is by far the highest in the league.

The situation has gradually been deteriorating under Winner. Three weeks ago, late in the game with a victory over Buffalo seemingly in his grasp, he decided to pass up a field goal on a fourth-and-one to run for a first down. The attempt failed and four plays later, Buffalo scored and won 24-23.

After a 27-7 loss to Miami, Winner decided to give the players an extra day off and they responded with their worst performance of the year. Making matters worse was a fistfight on the bench in the third quarter between two Jets, Ed Galigher and Steve Reese.

And Godwin Turk, a promising young linebacker in his first full season, added fuel Monday when he said he was seriously considering quitting football because of the attitude of some of his teammates. Turk said he would wait to see what changes were made before making a decision.

"I don't say there are any fat cats in our organization," said Winner. "Some people are more talented than others and sometimes people misinterpret if they're not successful. Everybody is frustrated right now and the worst thing that can happen to an organization is not to stick together."

The Jets return home Sunday for consecutive games against league powerhouses. They face St. Louis, the NFC East leader, Sunday, and then go against Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh the AFC Central leader, the following week. The New York ownership obviously doesn't want another embarrassment before the home fans, who serenaded Winner with chants of "Goodbye, Charley, we hate to see you go," and bore signs emblazoned with "Charley Loser" in recent games.

"I feel we're going to beat St. Louis," Winner said, "but everything has to be positive, starting with our coaches. As a coach, you try to make your group the best possible unit. You try to build on the positive things."

"It's a matter of trying to find the key to ignite 43 different personalities. When coaches get together at meeting, they don't discuss how to stop plays. We discuss things like how to generate enthusiasm."

Should Ilesin decide to replace Winner, it will be most probably with an assistant on an interim basis. Personnel Director Mike Holovak is the only man in the organization with any previous head coaching experience but he's 56 and has not served as a head coach since 1968. The other possible replacement is Sam Rutigliano, the defensive secondary coach who is considered one of the finest young coaches in the league.

Early talk about possible replacements for Winner was centered on Monte Clark, an assistant to Don Staley at Miami and one of the most sought after assistants in the NFL. Ernie Stautner, a former All-Pro defensive lineman who worked with Al Ward, the Jets' general manager, at Dallas, and Rutigliano, a native New Yorker with an excellent reputation

Squires Escape $ Death

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The Virginia Squires are alive today, having escaped a close brush with financial death.

A group of black businessmen came to their rescue Tuesday by contributing an estimated $200,000 to their survival.

The infusion of funds allowed the club to meet this week's payroll and guaranteed completion of the season. The Squires had been on the brink of becoming the third ABA franchise to fold this season.

"It's a great day for area sports," Squire General Manager Jack Ankerson said in announcing the club will stay afloat. "Now we can get down the business of basketball."

Tonight the Squires will be looking for only their second win in 14 games when they host the New York Nets. Injuries have hobbled the club which last year set a record for ABA futility with a mark of 15-69.

The critical 11th hour investment money came from Norfolk Investment Co. It will be matched by the New Virginia Squires, Inc., whose investment earlier in the year revitalized the franchise.

The company is headed by Elbert Stewart, president of Berkeley Citizens and Trust Co.; Walter Riddick, chairman of the board of Atlantic National Bank; and Kirk Saunders, general manager of the investment company.

"We look at this as a sound business investment," Saunders said. "We're confident that we can gain the support of the community and build the attendance to what we need to make the Squires a viable franchise."

Saunders said the group approached Squires general partner Van Cunningham on Monday "and our decision to go ahead was based on a community effort."

The Squires, while suffering at the bank and on the basketball court, have also been having problems at the gate. Crowds for home games have averaged under 3,000.

Club officials met with representatives of Norfolk Investment Co. Monday night and Tuesday morning before reaching an agreement.

Had the company not made the investment, the Squires would have joined the Baltimore Claws and San Diego Sails who folded earlier this year.

One of Ankerson's chief concerns now is finding a coach. The club fired Al Bianchi earlier this month but their unsure future prevented hiring of a replacement.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — "There's no possible merger in the offing" between the National Basketball Association and the American Basketball Association, NBA Commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien says.

"It's the consensus of opinion across the NBA that there's no interest in a merger. The main chore is the strengthening of the NBA," O'Brien said Tuesday as he visited here on a tour of league cities.

He also announced that Buffalo coach Jack Ramsey and Kansas City General Manager

Joe Axleson would be the two team representatives on a new officials review board announced last week. The third member of the board is John Nucatola, the supervisor of officials.

"Now nobody in the NBA can say nobody listens," O'Brien said.

He said no referees have yet been penalized, "but if it becomes necessary, they would be."

On a related subject, O'Brien said a third official would not be used in the near future because "the costs are prohibitive." A third official was used in pre-season games but it was "just an experiment."

O'Brien, who has been commissioner just five months, said the change from politics to professional sports was not that big a move, but "with all the legal dealings going on, I've met more lawyers and litigators since becoming commissioner than in my entire political career."

Knicks: Good News, Bad News

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's good news and bad news for the New York Knicks.

First, the bad news. The Knicks are in last place in the NBA's Atlantic Division. They have already lost nine games and the season is less than one month old. There are 17 other teams in the NBA and none has lost nine games.

And, among other things, you have to win games on the road if you're going to contend in the NBA — and the Knicks' road record is a sad 0-7.

Now for the good news.

Tuesday night, the Knicks easily topped Portland's Trail Blazers, 101-92, and looked like the Knicks of a few years ago — offensively alert and hawklike on defense.

Their all-star backcourt chalked up 49 points, 28 from Earl Monroe and 21 by Walt Frazier, the biggest chunk of the Knicks; good news was that their defense yielded only 92 points to Geoff Petrie, Sidney Wicks, and Bill Walton & Co. — a group which until Tuesday scored more than 93 points per game.

More good news.

The Knicks, who under coach Red Holzman just about gave berth to the concept of ultrastrong defense years ago, now seem to be putting it together defensively. The proof: In their last three games New York has kept its opposition to under 100 points per game. Their three-game yield averages out to under 92 points per 48 minutes and another note in the good news department is that they've captured three of their last four games.

In the Tuesday contest, Walton, who scored 12 points, played only 24 minutes because he re-injured his sprained right ankle. Walton seems to be panting early in the first quarter and was actually seconds behind in going down court on Portland's offensive thrusts.

How do the Knicks account for their tightened defense? Spencer Haywood, the new Knick, said: "The difference between the last four or five games and the earlier ones is that we're closing up the middle to offensive drives — we're rebounding better and minimizing the other team's opportunities for second shots."

Added Holzman, who couldn't resist responding with a wide grin: "I'd say it's improved coaching."

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said Bob McAdoo "played his usual game" against the Los Angeles Lakers. But, he added, "his usual game is very excellent."

It was indeed excellent Tuesday night as McAdoo outscored Jabbar 38 to 35 in the shoot-out of all-star centers and led the Buffalo Braves to a 120-106 National Basketball Association win over Los Angeles. The win enabled the Braves to move a half-game ahead of second place Philadelphia in the NBA Atlantic Division, while the Lakers dropped 1½ games behind front-running Golden State in the Pacific.

McAdoo, the league's leading scorer, was at his best in the third period, scoring 11 points and sparking a Buffalo fast break that charged into high gear and turned a one-point lead into a 74-62 cushion during a 2:30 stretch midway through the period.

McAdoo had a lot of help from Gar Heard, who scored nine points and pulled down nine rebounds during the decisive period. But Heard credited his rebounds to McAdoo's work on Abdul-Jabbar.

"I was trying to help Mac out with Jabbar and I didn't realize I had that many rebounds. Mac was busy trying to keep Jabbar away from the boards and if he keeps his man away, I can get the ball," Heard said.

Heard pulled down 19 rebounds during the game, while Abdul-Jabbar outdueled McAdoo 16 to 12 on the boards.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Golden State put away New Orleans 112-104 and Houston topped Cleveland 95-91.

In the only American Basketball Association game, Indiana vanquished Kentucky 106-92.

Warriors 112, Jazz 104

Rick Barry scored 22 points and led a fourth period charge which enabled the NBA champion Warriors to hand the suddenly muted Jazz their sixth straight loss. Golden State trailed, 74-73, after three periods, but Barry and rookie Gus Williams each scored 10 points in the final period. New Orleans star Pete Maravich was benched by a shoulder separation suffered in practice Monday.

Rockets 95, Cavaliers 91

Calvin Murphy had his free throw streak snapped a 58, but tossed in the two deciding baskets in the final two minutes to lead Houston over Cleveland. Rudy Tomjanovich added a pair of clutch free throws in the waning minutes as the Rockets snapped a 15-game losing streak on the road.

Pacers 106, Colonels 92

Len Elmore pumped in 23 points—equalling his career high—as Indiana, using substitutes in the final four minutes, coasted to victory over the defending ABA champs. The Pacers led by as much as 27 points at 97-63. Billy Knight also had 23 points for Indiana, while Artis Gilmore led Kentucky with 18 before being pulled in the final period when the game was out of reach.

Turned Off Support Systems

LONDON (UPI) — The physician wife of playwright Tom Stoppard says she ended a man's life in a hospital by switching off vital life-support equipment.

Dr. Miriam Stoppard, 37, introduced a television program Tuesday night focused on Karen Quinlan, a comatose American girl, whose parents were refused permission by a judge to turn off her life-saving machines.

Dr. Stoppard said she made the decision 10 years ago as a young doctor at Newcastle's Royal Victoria Hospital.

"On our ward was a young man of 27 who had suffered a cardiac arrest while having a tooth extracted under general anesthetic," she said.

"The consensus of the many experts who visited the ward was that he was medically dead, but nobody was prepared to turn the machines off.

"One morning after giving it a lot of thought I got up and switched the machines off."

Dr. Stoppard, now medical director of a large pharmaceutical firm, said: "It was the most upsetting experience of my medical career."

"I was not killing the patient. I was simply turning off the mechanism that was keeping him alive. I decided it was unnecessary and undignified."

Dr. Stoppard said her statement was "not a revelation. It is not dramatic. It is something doctors do every day of the week."

She said she had talked to the ward sister about the case, and it had not been solely her own decision. But she added: "I shook for a long time afterwards."

Phillips

Disagrees

KINGSTON Thomas R. Phillips, president of the Ulster County Chapter of the Civil Service Employees Association (CSEA), takes exception to reports from the Finance Committee of the County Legislature that CSEA contract increases to the tune of $1.6 million are one of the main reasons county taxes are projected to be some 80 per cent higher next year.

Frankly, I don't know where they got that figure," Phillips, also chief negotiator for CSEA, told the Freeman Tuesday.

Phillips points out that the existing contract provides for a cost of living increase clause that expires on Dec. 31, 1975. The 1976 budget takes effect the next day. Phillips says the federal government figures the cost of living rise in 1976 at 4.8 per cent, as of the end of September, the latest date for which figures are available.

CSEA represents between 900 and 1,000 of the 1,200 county employees. "We're still the lowest paid in the state in most of our departments," Phillips insisted.

No Banquet

The Rondout Valley Athletic Booster Club will meet Thursday night at the high school cafeteria at 7:30 but there will be no banquet as incorrectly reported in Tuesday's Freeman. The club is meeting to make plans for its annual banquet.

Mason Aide To Speak

SAUGERTIES Benjamin Schecter, administrative assistant to State Senator Edwyn E. Mason, will address the next meeting of the Saugerties Republican Club Nov. 20 on "A Day in the Life of a Senator."

Schecter, an aide for the past four years, has been involved in many civic and Zionist organizations in Kingston. The 8 p.m. meeting is scheduled for Buono's Restaurant, Market and Livingston Streets.

NOTICE OF CHANGE IN GAS RATE SCHEDULE

On October 31, 1975 Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation filed with the Public Service Commission of the State of New York revisions to gas rate schedule, P.S.C. No. 11—Gas, to become effective December 1, 1975. Said revisions propose a change in the factor of adjustment of the Gas Cost Adjustment Clause. Based on a recomputation for the twelve months ending August 31, 1975, the factor of adjustment decreases from 0.0109 to 0.0108 cents per 100 cu. ft. for each 0.01 cent per 100 cu. ft. change in the average costs of gas above or below the base costs of gas.

BANKERS TRUST HUDSON VALLEY NATIONAL ASSOCIATION

Plaintiff,

— against —

THOMAS INGRASSIA AND

THERESA INGRASSIA

Defendants

— Sheriff's Sale —

By virtue of an execution issued out of the County Court, County of Ulster, I, the undersigned Sheriff of Ulster County, have seized all right, title and interest which the defendants, THOMAS INGRASSIA AND THERESA INGRASSIA, had on the 1st day of May, 1973, or subsequent thereto, of, in and to the following described premises, which I shall offer for sale at public auction as the law directs, at the Ulster County Court House, in the City of Kingston, County of Ulster, New York on the 6th day of January, 1976, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, to wit:

All that certain plot, piece or parcel of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate lying and being on the Town of Saugerties, County of Ulster and State of New York, known and designated as lot No. 55 on a certain map entitled "Map of Notch View Park, situate at West Saugerties, Ulster County, New York," and filed in the office of the Ulster County Clerk as Map No. 939.

TOGETHER with all right, title and interest, if any, of the party of the first part in and to any streets and road abutting the above described premises to the center line thereof.

Being a part of the premises conveyed to Edward Kramer and Janet Kramer, his wife, by a deed dated June 6, 1972 and recorded in the Ulster County Clerk's Office on June 8, 1972 in Book 1279 of Deeds at Page 551.

Dated, October 21, 1975

EXECUTIVE CAR BUYERS

EXCLUSIVE 12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES
GUARANTEE ON THE DRIVE TRAIN ON THESE SELECT AUTOMOBILES

We have a choice selection of '73 thru '76 Chevy, Pontiac, Ford, Oldsmobile, Buick and Plymouth Station Wagons, most with factory air conditioning. Plus the luxurious Cadillacs & Lincolns and an unusual selection of sedans both two & four door and a tremendous selection of late model compact cars, both foreign and domestic. These cars were driven by executives and have been regularly maintained and are in unusually fine condition ready for your driving pleasure. These cars carry balance of factory warranty. These cars compare to new in every way. These are definitely not daily rental or U drive cars.

Jean Adams

TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Ph.D.

DIFFERENT. (Q) I am 15 and David is 17. My mother thinks our age difference is too great. She let my previous boy friends come to our house, but not David. She says I'm running from one boy to another and that starts a bad reputation.

I went with Reg for two months and then Luke for two and a half months, and now David. But David and I have something going for each other that the rest of them didn't. My mother says I am too young to start dating. What do you think? — Desperate in New Jersey

(A.) It seems to me that your mother may not be as concerned with the age difference or the fact of dating as she is with this "something" that you say you and David have going.

She senses that your attitude toward David is different from the feeling you had for Reg and Luke, and she knows that at 15 you are not ready for total commitment. Talk to her about the details of your feelings toward David. Do not hold back. Knowing the facts will help her to face them.

THREAT: (Q) I'm a teen-age disk jockey for a radio station. Almost every night I get a phone call from a female. She is always talking about making love to me and trying to talk me into meeting her someplace. How can I stop her from calling me at work and putting my job in danger. The station records request calls — On the Spot in Pennsylvania

(A.) Radio stations that take and broadcast calls from listeners, as yours evidently does, have ways of keeping unsuitable calls off the air. I am sure your station has such a system.

Talk to your superior about your problem. The solution will probably be simply to hang up on the girl when she calls. This will stop her. To listen to her and carry on long conversations with her only encourages her to keep calling.

West takes his ace and decides to lead a trump, but it's too late. South wins in dummy, ruffs another diamond, cashes his queen of clubs and ace of hearts and ruffs a club. Now he ruffs another diamond with his last trump and has eight tricks in. Let's count them. One trump in dummy, three diamond ruffs, one club ruff, the aces of hearts and diamonds and the queen of clubs. He still has two good trumps in dummy to give him the 10 he needs.

If West opens a trump he is sure to get the lead again to be able to lead a second trump. This will cut South down to a maximum of nine tricks which isn't enough.

Why did they put the model in a trash compactor before they measured him as the average passenger for bus seat knee room?

It's much easier to be level-headed discussing the economy in a nice restaurant than when looking longingly in the window.

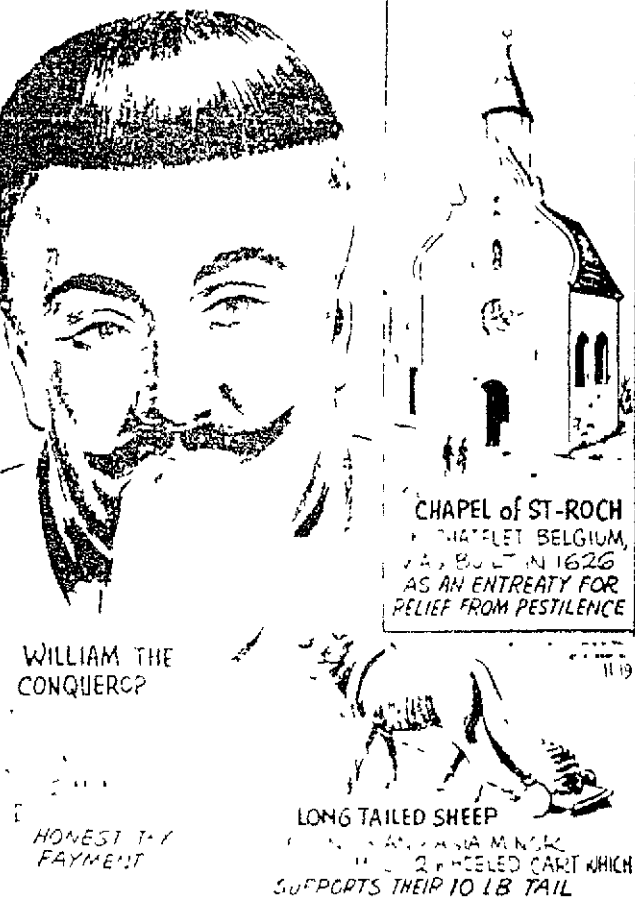

Have one for the road and it could be followed by a short bier.

After watching the late-early movie, the test pattern makes interesting viewing.

Denied Entrance, She Changes

ELLENVILLE

Jane Cheryl Rosenstock of Rosenstock Road, Ellenville, who filed suit in federal court Friday against the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill after being denied admission there, has been accepted at another school.

Stanley Rosenstock, the girl's father, confirmed Monday that his daughter was attending another college but declined to identify the school.

Asked if she would transfer to North Carolina if her suit is successful, Rosenstock said: "I don't know and she doesn't know. By the time the suit is tried she will probably be 25 years old and out of college."

Rosenstock, vice president of General Sportwear, a family-owned corporation, said he wasn't seeking any monetary gain from the suit.

"My main purpose was to make sure that some other child won't be discriminated against in the future," he said.

He said that his daughter had done extremely well at Ellenville High School, where she graduated in June, winning several honors, including a citizenship award from the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Miss Rosenstock charged in her suit in federal court in Greensboro, N.C., that the school discriminates against out-of-staters and children of non-alumni. She urged the court to throw out a quota system for out-of-state students and order an overhaul in the entire UNC admissions policy, which she claims violates her right to equal protection under the law.

In her suit, Miss Rosenstock noted that her family owned four corporations in North Carolina with annual payrolls in excess of $2.6 million which paid more than $18,000 in real estate taxes last year.

Shandaken Budget Hike . . . Welfare Blamed

PHOENICIA

It's called "home relief" . . . but it spells anything but relief for Town of Shandaken taxpayers who will have to shoulder the brunt of an almost $38,000 increase in general fund appropriations for 1976.

The 1976 budget approved by the Shandaken Town Board totals $303,542 for general fund purposes, an increase of $37,909.45 over the 1975 general fund budget. Better than one-third of that increase — or $13,000 — can be blamed on soaring welfare costs.

Last year, the town board appropriated just $7,000 for home relief, that part of the welfare burden that is assumed by the townships in Ulster County. The home relief appropriation for 1976 totals $20,000.

Last week, the Ulster County Legislature defeated a proposal that would have allowed the county to pay for the cost of home relief. Ulster, at present, is the only county in New York State where home relief costs are borne by the individual townships.

Even without the increase in home relief costs, the total 1976 budget would have shown an increase. Some of the more significant increases in the 1976 budget include constabulary (from $33,038 to $40,515), refuse collection (from $12,500 to $16,000), Social Security (from $13,000 to $15,000) and hospitalization benefits (from $12,000 to $16,000). There is also a $5,000 appropriation for Bicentennial expenses which was not covered in last year's budget.

With estimated revenues of $53,563 and an unexpended balance of $15,000, the amount to be raised by taxes in 1976 totals $234,978.89, about $20,000 higher than the amount raised by taxes in 1975. With a total assessed valuation of $11,637,330, the general fund tax rate is projected at about $20 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

The highway fund for 1976

totals $279,581. With anticipated revenues of $6,600, the total to be raised by taxes for the highway fund is $272,981.77, an increase of about $4,000. The tax rate is projected at $23.45 per $1,000 of assessed valuation for highway fund purposes.

In other budget areas, the Phoenicia Water District shows a drop from $29,800 to $18,425, the Phoenicia Lighting District increased from $6,150 to $5,200, the Chester Lighting District remains at $675, the Phoenicia

Fire District dropped from $32,610 to $31,803, the High-mount district remains at $2,000 and the Big Indian-Oliveria Fire District shows an increase from $6,425 to $7,925.
